Property Guarded

By Felix Cotten,
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt undertook yesterday to place in safekeeping for its rightful owners Norwegian and Danish money and property located in this country.

Climaxing the day's developments here from the war's spread abroad was an executive order of the President "freezing" Norwegian and Danish funds held in this country and permitting withdrawals only under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The object clearly was to prevent Norwegian and Danish wealth located in this country from falling into Nazi hands.

Warns U. S. Ships

Earlier, Mr. Roosevelt, in a proclamation, ordered ships flying the United States flag to stay out of all Norwegian waters, as well as those of northern Finland and northwest Russia.

Meanwhile, Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones announced, following a call at the White House, that the Export-Import Bank would follow a "stop, look and listen" policy with regard to further withdrawals against credits recently established by the bank for the account of Scandinavian countries.

No Precedent for Move

Under yesterday's executive order, it was explained, no withdrawals will be permitted until a "census" has been taken of Norwegian and Danish bank balances, securities and other property located in the country. In order to get this information, the Treasury last night sent special forms to Federal Reserve Banks to be distributed to all person holding Nor-

WASHINGTON'S "WORLD OF TOMORROW"—Inventive genius claimed a rest period and contemplated Models June Cox and Olive Cawley in their impressionistic costumes representing "Food" and "Aviation" at last night's Bureau of Patents dinner

More than 1,200 inventors, industrialists and Patent Office officials sat down last night to an astonishing dinner produced by the Mayflower's inventive cooks and heard creative genius lauded for lightening the burdens of man.

The dinner, staged by the Bureau of Patents of the Department of Commerce to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the first United States patent law, included such delicacies as aluminum nuts, vacuum tubers and incandescent salad. It was concluded by addresses by Undersecretary of Commerce Edward J. Noble and Commissioner of Patents Conway P. Coe.

These formidable designations on the menu, the diners discovered, cloaked most palatable dishes. Aluminum nuts were simply roasted nuts rolled in aluminum-colored powder; reaper rolls were billed as "special secrets of the Mayflower's chef" and each bore a sugar-coated picture of the McCormick reaper. Carborundum canapes were caviar, and telegraph soup was just soup with dots and dashes instead of alphabetical noodles.

Frozen white meat of turkey was the climax, flanked by vacuum tubers, which turned out to be potatoes souffled to resemble radio

Great Naval Action Roars In Kattegat

Fishermen Report Seeing 2 Troopships, 2 Cruisers Sunk In 9-Hour Struggle

By the United Press

Gothenburg, Sweden (Thursday), April 11.—Fishing boats loaded with dead and wounded soldiers and sailors arrived in the little Swedish islands off Gothenburg early today from the scene of a nine-hour battle between British and German warships.

The furious sea battle, which centered in a spot northwest of the island of Hippeln, where the Skagerrak bends into the Kattegat between Sweden and Denmark, was witnessed by inhabitants of several islands along Sweden's southwest coast.

(Stockholm reports placed German losses at three troopships and three or four cruisers.)

One of the four or five German troop transports sunk in the battle was the Antaras, according to Swedish press reports, which said 188 soldiers and the crew were lost. Thirty-four were rescued.

So terrific were the detonations of broadsides and torpedoes hitting their marks that houses on the islands shook as though rattled by an earthquake.

Ships Explode, Vanish

Residents og Hippeln said they saw two ships, which they believed to be German troopships, explode and disappear beneath the water in the space of moments.

Hundreds of heads bobbed in the water, at first, then became fewer and fewer.

The fisherfolk wanted to go to the rescue of those in the water, but feared to take their small boats out because of the intense firing.

Residents of the island of Eskeroe near Hippeln saw two warships sink stern first.

A German cruiser was in flames.

Large circles of smoke obscured another badly damaged cruiser.

From the town of Marstrand north of Gothenburg it was reported that the German fleet, consisted of 23 ships, of which 11 were troop transports.

Bodies Washed Up on Coast

When the firing subsided somewhat a small fishing boat left the island of Roeroe and returned with a heavy load of dead and wounded soldiers and sailors. Other fishing boats and motor launches went out then to pick up dead and survivors.

A number of bodies were washed up along the Swedish coast.

New Thrust At Narvik Is Reported

British Marines Said To Be in Ore Port; Nazi Vessels There All Hit, London Says

By the Associated Press

London, April 10.—Britain struck blow after blow at Germany with her naval and air might along the entire western coast of Norway and far into the Baltic Sea approaches today, fighting a constant chain of bitter battles which may hold the key to the fate of Scandinavia and the European war itself.

Guns roared, ships were sunk and men died all the way from Narvik, tiny Norwegian ore port far above the Arctic Circle, down to the Kattegat, strategic entrance to the Baltic Sea, traditionally German-ruled yet penetrated today by a fiercely fighting British fleet.

Battle Goes On

Reports to London, most of which lacked comment from the "silent service" of the admiralty, indicated major naval engagements still were in progress late tonight as the British sought to oust the Nazis from their newly won Norwegian ports and land expeditionary forces.

Highlights of the day were:

1. A broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation late tonight said British warships "appear to have routed" German forces in Oslo Fjord and "there has been ruthless bombing of Norwegian towns in the neighborhood by German planes." With the help of Norwegian warships and land batteries, at least 40,000 tons of German naval shipping was reported sunk in the Oslo Fjord.

2. President C. J. Hambro of the Norwegian Parliament announced in Stockholm that he had received word from the Norwegian commander in Bergen that "the British now are in possession of the city." Earlier Hambro had announced that Trondheim, also, had been taken from the Germans. There was no further word concerning this port, however, in British press reports reaching here, and the Germans made an official denial of both reports.

Narvik Landing Reported

3. A mighty battle raged deep in the Skagerrak, near its juncture with the Kattegat, with the British fleet reported attacking ten big German troopships, sinking two, scattering the others and sinking a German destroyer.

An unconfirmed report from Stockholm, circulated by Reuters, placed the German losses in the Skagerrak naval battle at four cruis-

Berlin, April 10.—Most of the German troops which occupied Narvik are believed to have moved by rail via Leningrad and Murmansk, which lends credence to the reports that the Soviet Union is cooperating fully with Germany in the conquest of Norway.

Nazis May Patrol Danube

Budapest, April 10 (AP).—Usually responsible sources said today Germany is expected to send gunboats down the Danube in the near future to protect the Reich's vital river traffic against "sabotage" in neutral southeastern Europe.

Oil Barges Sink

Bucharest, April 10 (AP).—A river boat carrying 70 tons of corn to Germany, and two barges, each carrying 700 tons of oil for the Reich, sank in the Danube today after explosion. There was no immediate explanation.

Tromsoe Calls for Aid

London, April 10 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm said tonight the radio station at Tromsoe had broadcast an appeal to the British fleet to send assistance because two German warships were landing troops at Aalesund, roughly 150 miles north of Bergen.

Juliana Flees Danger Zone

The Hague (Thursday), April 11 (AP).—Princess Juliana, her consort, Prince Bernhard, and their two baby daughters, last night left their palace at Soestdijk to stay in the Hague with Queen Wilhelmina. Soestdijk is in the heart of the Netherlands' main defense line of flood waters and fortifications.

Russian Troops Mass

London, April 10 (INS).—Indications that Soviet Russia might soon become involved in the fighting along the Norwegian coast were seen tonight in a Reuters dispatch from Stockholm stating that heavy concentrations of Soviet troops were reported in North Russia. The Stockholm Aftonbladet reported the Soviet fleet in Murmansk and other northern ports had steam up.

Rumania's Stand Asked

New York, April 10 (AP).—Radio Roma, official Italian short-wave station, reported in a broadcast picked up tonight by CBS that Germany and Russia had called upon Rumania to express her attitude on recent developments in the international situation.

Danes Get New Cabinet

Berlin, April 10 (INS).—An official German news agency dispatch from Copenhagen tonight stated that a new national government, consisting of present Socialist-Radical Prime Minister Stauning and six members of opposition parties, had been formed.

Nazis Hail Victory

Berlin (Thursday), April 11 (U.P.).—Huge headlines claiming a decisive German victory over the British fleet and the smashing of an Allied attempt to land in Norway appeared in all Berlin morning newspapers today.

Swedes Face Demands

London, April 10 (U.P.).—It was rumored here tonight that Adolf Hitler may send an ultimatum to Sweden demanding transit for German troops and supplies now that the Allies are on the offensive along the Norwegian coast.

At Gate to Baltic

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 10.—British warships, forcing the Oslo Fjord, tonight were reported in delayed advices to have threatened to shell the city of Oslo unless the Germans surrender it quickly. The population was fleeing the city in panic.

According to dispatches reaching here by way of the Swedish-Norwegian frontier town of Charlottenberg, the British demanded the surrender by 1 p. m. Wednesday (7 a. m. E. S. T.).

Whether the shelling had begun was not known, but during the morning there were many air fights above the harbor and on the eastern shore of Oslo Fjord.

The evacuation order was distributed at 11:15 a. m. (5:15 a. m. E. S. T.) by Norwegian officers in the city.

Mass Exodus Begins

Cars, trucks and buses rushed out of the city in a great cavalcade, and railways were jammed.

All railway cars available were coupled to the evacuation trains.

Dramatic scenes were enacted among the refugees. In some cases mothers, with children in their arms, fainted in the streets.

A proclamation reaffirming Norway's determination to resist German invasion and rejecting a German demand for recognition of a Nazi puppet government under Maj. Vikdun Quisling has been issued by Premier Johan Nygaardsvold, according to a Norwegian news agency dispatch from Elverum, the present seat of the refugee government.

Heavy Air Fighting

The entry of the British into Oslo Fjord was reported to have followed a long battle at the fjord entrance, in which the Germans were believed to have lost 40,000 tons of warships, including one vessel of the Deutschland class, in contacts with both British guns and the navy and coastal artillery of the Norwegians.

Third-term Democrats and Dewey Republicans rejoiced yesterday over primary conquests in Illinois and Nebraska, but G. O. P. leaders singled out one special Congressional election as indicating a significant Republican trend.

Silent on third term prospects and the G. O. P. Presidential race, Republican organization chiefs declared their capture of the only House seat at stake in the balloting—Nebraska's normally Democratic First District—foreshadowed a Republican House.

Subcommittee Agrees On Reorganization, But Keeps Silent

The House subcommittee on District reorganization yesterday indefinitely postponed action on local suffrage after reaching tentative decisions on the rearrangement of some of the municipal departments.

Members of the subcommittee, who will hold a special session tonight to complete consideration of the reorganization bill, declined to reveal what action was taken.

It was learned from a reliable authority, however, that the suffrage proposal, sponsored by Chairman Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, was taken up at the outset of the executive meeting. The majority voted to postpone action.

Consideration will come as a separate issue, it was decided, after the reorganization bill is disposed of.

3 Killed, Woman, Son Near Death In Feud Shooting

Monte Vista, Colo., April 10 (AP).—Three men were killed and a woman and her 22-year-old son were wounded probably fatally tonight in what Police Chief Max Richardson called a "bad blood" shooting.

Richardson said Pat Maes, 50-year-old sheep man, had admitted shooting Raymond Martinez, 38, deputy sheriff; Manuel Ortega, 40, Maes' brother-in-law, and Edward Dominquez, 30.

The three were killed by rifle bullets, Richardson related, after Mrs. Maes, 44, and her son, Frank 22, had been shot and critically wounded by Martinez. Neither will recover, doctors said.

Red Cross in U. S. Offers to Assist Besieged Norway

Norway was offered American Red Cross aid yesterday by headquarters here.

A cable, sent by Ernest J. Swift, vice chairman in charge of foreign conditions, read: "If there is anything we can do to help the Norwegian Red Cross in this situation please advise."

Two representatives of the American group are in Finland and will be sent to Norway if their help is needed, Swift said.

In recent months, the American Red Cross sent more than $1,136,000 to Finland. Yesterday it received contributions totaling $63,000 designated for the relief of Polish war victims.

Agree to Disagree

Mrs. Whitney Gets $3,000,000 Under Settlement, Keeps Farm

By the Associated Press

New York, April 10.—The separation agreement between John Hay (Jock) Whitney and his attractive wife, the former Mary Elizabeth Altemus, of Philadelphia, provides her with a personal fortune of close to $3,000,000.

While this sum isn't one, two or three with the settlements agreed to by the wealthy in boom days before '29, it still is one of the largest in recent years—and besides Mrs. Whitney has acquired quite a chunk of property in her own name since she married the popular sportsman ten years ago.

For almost two years the couple maintained a discreet silence as to their status and future, although it was evident they were not living together; but a few days ago Mrs. Whitney arrived in Reno.

Some time ago as a gift for his wife, Whitney purchased Llangollen farm in Upperville, Va., a palatial estate of about 2,000 acres, and it always has been in her name.

She keeps this property, and undoubtedly will use it as the center for her thoroughbred breeding activities.

Romantic rumors about the intentions of one or the other bob up frequently, but it is understood that at the present neither has any serious intention of marrying again. The separation and proposed divorce came about because they weren't congenial, and it really was just an agreement to disagree.

Norse Dazed as Nazis Descend, Wonder Where the British Are

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, April 10.—In an eye-witness account of the entry of a German column 1,000 strong into the center of Oslo at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a correspondent of the Reuters news agency who escaped over the frontier to Sweden writes that every man was armed with a formidable-looking rifle or machine gun and was carrying a bandolier, uncovered and glistening with bronzed machinegun bullets, ready for immediate action.

They met no resistance. The inhabitants, bewildered by the swift sequence of events and the incredible experience of the past eight hours, lined the streets to watch the capture entry. The city had capitulated about an hour earlier after a night and morning of terror, during which German airplanes bombed all military objectives in the neighborhood and machinegunned districts around the harbor defenses.

Already the Germans had taken over control of all military airfields, including Fornebo, just outside Oslo, where 50 German bombers landed. With these they had threatened to blow the inhabitants of the city out of existence if any resistance were shown.

By noon the main station of Oslo was packed with evacuees hurriedly leaving the city, women, children and elderly men carrying all the possessions they could muster. They

FCC Retarding Television, Says Sarnoff

Claims Billion-Dollar Industry With Jobs For 500,000 Held Back

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, charged the Federal Communications Commission with retarding a budding billion dollar industry that ultimately would employ 500,000 or more persons yesterday as the FCC-RCA television controversy moved to Capitol Hill.

Testifying before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on the Lundeen resolution calling for an investigation of the FCC's action, Sarnoff complained that RCA had been treated unfairly and "publicly indicted" by the commission and that the sale of television receivers in New York has "practically stopped."

Expressing the opinion that the introduction of commercial television at this time is "both timely and important," Sarnoff said the RCA is ready to launch a relay network, to market home television receivers with pictures as large as 18 x 24 inches, and to make available theater television receiving equipment which will project pictures on full size motion picture screens.

Jobs for 500,000

He said the television industry might be expected to employ between 500,000 and 600,000 persons on the basis of the broadcast industry's investment and employment.

While Sarnoff assailed the FCC order before the committee, Senator W. Warren Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, introduced a resolution specifically denying the FCC authority to control or interfere with experimentation, research, use, manufacture, or sale of television sending or receiving sets.

Earlier James L. Fly, FCC chairman, had defended the commission's recent order reopening the television inquiry on the ground that RCA's commercial promotion of receivers was threatening to "freeze" development and load the public with sets that may soon become obsolete.

Chairman Burton K. Wheeler sought several times to persuade Sarnoff to agree to alter the design of the RCA television receivers so that they could receive any current system of visual broadcasting. The Senator expressed the opinion that this would remove the cause of the dispute.

Cites Price Increase

Sarnoff insisted the additional expense of $20 to $40, which would be represented in an increase in the sales price, is not warranted, as competing systems do not have television stations in operation except in a very limited experimental capacity.

Fly retorted that the FCC shortly would grant transmission licenses to sponsors of television transmission different from that used by R. C. A., Allen B. Du Mont, of Passaic, N. J., chief rival of R. C. A. in the current fight, has an application for a permit to erect a station in New York.

At the conclusion of his testimony Sarnoff engaged in a sharp exchange with William A. Roberts, attorney for Du Mont, who challenged some of the R. C. A. president's statements. When Sarnoff retorted that Du Mont was owned by Paramount Pictures, Roberts denied it but admitted the motion picture company had backed Du Mont financially.

Chairman Wheeler and other members raised the question as to why Great Britain had enjoyed television for two years prior to the outbreak of the war.

Sarnoff replied that England's progress was due to the fact that a government commission investigated all phases of the art and then fixed transmission standards for a specified period.

Sarnoff termed ridiculous the contention of FCC that the sale of a projected 25,000 television sets in the New York area would "freeze" transmission standards and halt further research. He pointed out that experimentation in frequency modulation is going ahead although none of the 40,000,000 standard radio receivers will be able to tune in FM stations.

He hotly denied that R. C. A. was trying to obtain a monopoly of the infant industry when Wheeler said such charges were being made against the corporation.

The Senate committee will conclude its hearing today after hearing Commander T. A. M. Craven, the one member of the FCC who voted against reopening the television inquiry.

Edsel Ford, Labor Chief Agree More Buying Power Is Needed

Monopoly Inquiry Told Machines Make Jobs But Not Enough

Edsel Ford, president of the giant Ford Motor Co., and R. J. Thomas, head of the United Automobile Workers, yesterday agreed that a sharp increase in mass purchasing power is essential if Michigan's automobile plants are to furnish maximum employment.

Thomas, who spent 15 years "in the shops" before rising to leadership of the C. I. O. union, told the Temporary National Economic Committee that the "pinch of technological employment" will not be removed until rising powers of production are matched by equal power to consume.

Ford insisted that, despite revolutionary technological developments, the huge plant founded by his father is "steadily employing more men per automotive unit produced.

Not Enough, He Agrees

The young industrialist nodded agreement, however, when Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, asserted that technology alone is powerless to produce jobs. No invention will enable the automobile industry to put all its jobless back to work, the committee chairman said, unless the industry's market is vastly broadened.

Testimony of automobile capital and labor was separated yesterday by appearance of a surprise witness, 33-year-old Douglass Winnek, inventor of "trivision photography."

Winnek said his discovery of a process for three dimensional photography will increase the accuracy of X-rays and heighten the military value of aerial photography.

"Camouflage wouldn't be much good against this kind of film," he stated.

Ready for Market

Five patents protect the basic process for softening the film and applying a minute, beaded surface on one side, he explained. Another 200 patent applications "are on the way," he added, covering X-ray tubes, range-finders and cameras designed to give the best results with the new film.

Committee members accepted the New York engineer's invitation to "get the illusion of depth" by inspecting a sample set of three-dimensional photographs of flowers and advertising models.

Winnek predicted his process will be marketed commercially within six months. For the present, he said, his firm is "selling some nonsensical little gadgets to keep ourselves alive and raise revenue to finance tri-vision."

Charles Hook, president of the American Rolling Mill Co., and Philip Murray, head of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, will appear before the committee today in the Caucus room of the Senate Office Building.

Ford yesterday made no reference to trade unionism, but Thomas' testimony was interspersed with attacks on Ford labor policy.

Poll Tax Fosters Corruption, Virginian Tells Committee

By the Associated Press

George A. Pruner, of Lebanon, Va., Republican member of the Virginia House of Delegates, said yesterday "thousands of dollars" were spent annually in Virginia by politicians and political organizations for the sole purpose of "qualifying the electorate" to vote.

Testifying before a House judiciary sub-committee in support of a bill prohibiting payment of poll taxes as a prerequisite for voting in Federal elections, Pruner said "the two chief obstacles to honest elections in Virginia" were the poll tax and the absentee voters' tax.

It was "generally conceded," he said, that the poll tax requirement was written into the State constitution in the 1902 constitutional convention for the purpose of disfranchising the Negro, but that it had instead become a means of political corruption.

An act of the 1930 General Assembly seeking to place restriction on the block payment of poll taxes, he said, was a "futile effort" and as finally passed would have no practical benefit.

He said he was "firm in the belief" that no matter what the legislature did to remedy corruption "there will always be loopholes and the only way to correct the situation is to abolish the poll tax entirely as a prerequisite to voting."

He argued the poll tax requirement for voting was "fundamentally wrong in principle" and that it "discouraged and prevented many capable citizens from seeking public office."

He said political parties, in "some, if not all," of the eight Southern States having the poll tax prerequisite, "select their candidates on the theory that the man who can and will command the most money with which to pay the electorate's poll taxes deserves the party nomination."

In southwest Virginia, he said, "the woods are full of prospective candidates of the Abe Lincoln and Thomas Jefferson type in ability, but they haven't the money to qualify the voters."

Illinois Poll Shows G. O. P. Gain Over '38

Roosevelt Victory Hailed as 'Demand' For Renomination

Chicago, April 10 (AP).—The thumping indorsement of a third term for President Roosevelt by Illinois Democrats shared interest tonight with signs of Republican gains in the State's primary elections.

Projections indicated Roosevelt's total would approximate 1,160,000 compared with 193,000 for Vice President Garner and 977,000 for Thomas E. Dewey, who displayed vote-pulling power while running unopposed on the Republican side.

These figures, if confirmed by the official canvass, would give Dewey and Garner a combined total slightly larger than Roosevelt's.

Projections based on both party's Senatorial contests indicated the Democrats had polled more than 1,300,000 votes in comparison to their 1,744,005 total in the 1938 primary and that the Republicans had gathered more than 1,000,000 compared with 806,637 two years ago.

Dewey's indicated total of 977,000 would exceed the 910,795 compiled by Col. Frank Knox and Senator William E. Borah together in the 1936 Republican preference primary while Roosevelt's would fall under the 1,416,411 he received in his uncontested preference test four years ago.

Dewey forces here expected him to receive the support of the Illinois delegation to the Republican National Convention on the basis of his showing. Mayor Edward J. Kelly, whose Chicago Democratic organization placed the President in the race without a statement from him, interpreted his victory as a "demand" that Roosevelt be renominated and predicted the Democratic delegation would so insist. However, the results were not binding on either group of 58 delegates.

Dwight H. Green, of Chicago, former United States district attorney who helped prosecute Al Capone and who ran a strong race against Kelly in the 1939 mayoralty election, will oppose Harry B. Hershey, former chairman of the Democratic State committee, in the fight for the governorship.

Governor Race in Doubt

Lincoln, Nebr., April 10 (AP).—A neck-and-neck stretch drive between an advocate of higher old-age pensions and a wealthy former Governor left Nebraska in doubt tonight about its Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

tI was the only major race undecided after unofficial returns from all but a few scattered precincts gave District Attorney Dewey a second Republican Presidential preference victory in the farm belt over Senator Vandenberg of Michigan and unseated Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), outspoken New Deal antagonist on many issues.

Terry Carpenter, Scottsbluff, advocate of a State wholesale liquor monopoly to provide $30 a month old-age pensions, had 67,208 unofficial ballots to 65,535 for former Gov. Keith Neville, North Platte, in 1,983 of the State's 2,033 precincts.

In 1,956 precincts, Dewey rolled up 99,905 unofficial ballots; Vandenberg, 72,108.

President Roosevelt, unopposed in the Presidential indicator, which traditionally binds each party's 14 convention delegates, got a 109,386 total in 1,956 precincts.

In 1,975 precincts Gov. Cochran polled 81,729 unofficial votes to Burke's 58,434. Burke conceded defeat when Cochran's margin neared 20,000.

All four of the incumbent Congressmen were renominated easily, two Democrats and two Republicans. The remaining district, the First, paired former Mayor Oren Copeland (Republican), of Lincoln, against former Representative Henry C. Luckey (Democrat), of Lincoln.

G. O. P. Hails Nebraska Vote As Good Omen

Capture of House Seat Shows Nation's Trend, Party Leaders Claim

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, struck back with fighting statements that said, in effect, that they are still in the race and will battle for the nomination to the end.

E. B. Germany and Clara Driscoll, Garner chairmen, despite the Texan's more than 6 to 1 Illinois rout by the President, reasserted that Garner "can unite the Democratic Party and lead it to victory. His campaign will be carried forward with increased vigor."

Howard C. Lawrence, chairman of the Vandenberg movement, pointed to Dewey's narrow 4-to-3 lead over Vandenberg in Nebraska, and said:

"Our flags are up and our banners are flying. We shall carry on with increased energy and enthusiasm."

President Roosevelt's expected stampede over Garner in Illinois, and his ballot total there only slightly less than the combined Dewey and Garner votes, confirmed the established belief among Democrats that Mr. Roosevelt can have the nomination if he wants it.

Dewey Gains Impetus

New York District Attorney Dewey's second primary triumph in a week over Vandenberg provided needed impetus to keep his poll-leading bandwagon going, but made him the top man target for a "Stop Dewey" movement among G. O. P. regulars that is expected to strike at his lead.

A mixed political trend picture was presented by primaries in the two States, with the Roosevelt-led Democratic vote outdistancing the Republican in Illinois, but with the combined Dewey and Garner ballots far exceeding Democratic votes for the President in Nebraska. This was partially explained by the fact that lack of opposition to Dewey in Illinois, and the President's unopposed race in Nebraska, failed to turn out record votes in either case.

The one spot of unmixed joy to Republican leaders was the G. O. P. special Congressional election victory in Nebraska's first district, following on the heels of similar G. O. P. triumphs in Ohio and Iowa.

In the Nebraska district, J. Hyde Sweet, Republican, won the vacant House seat of the late Representative Heinke, Republican, over Charles Dafoe, New Deal Democrat. Significant fact was that Sweet polled about 57 per cent of the total vote, as against 47 per cent polled by Heinke against a split Democratic ticket in 1938.

Recalling the 7 per cent increased Republican ballot in winning two Ohio Congressional elections six weeks ago, and the 3 per cent Republican pickup in retaining the sixth Iowa district seat a month ago, G. O. P. leaders traced a corn belt "tide" in their favor.

"It means a Republican House in 1941 regardless of who wins the Presidency," said House Republican Leader Martin. "That's the trend and you can't laugh it off. I saw the House start going Democratic the same way in 1931. It is history repeating itself, only this time the cycle is Republican."

Chairman J. William Ditter, of the National Republican Congressional Committee, listed five other previous Republican House victories this year and jubilantly announced:

"Nebraska now has joined the parade of Republican States as reflected in the special Congressional elections."

Democrats generally were silent on Nebraska's House election, but answered Republican trend claims by pointing to Illinois' huge Democratic primary vote. The Illinois balloting, said the Democratic National Committee, "completely destroys the myth of a Republican trend in this year's Presidential election." The combined Illinois Democratic vote for both the President and Vice President Garner was 61.45 per cent of total ballots cast, a "landslide" showing, said the Democratic committee.

Republicans, nonetheless, polled in excess of their 1936 Illinois primary showing, while the combined Garner-Roosevelt vote trailed the total Roosevelt ballot cast there four years ago.

Steelman Sees Hope of Ending Orchestra Row

'Not Abandoned,' He Says; Symphony Assn. Meets Today

A meeting this afternoon of the National Symphony Orchestra Association may have an important bearing on the future of the orchestra, the demands of whose musicians for more pay are under consideration.

John R. Steelman, director of the Labor Department's conciliation service, declared last night that while, "for the present," association negotiators and the Musicians' Protective Union remain deadlocked, "we have not abandoned hope that a settlement can be reached."

The hope, it was learned, rests on willingness of the association to guarantee its musicians a 25-week season.

The association's board of directors, whose report on the dispute is to be made at the meeting at 5 p. m. today in the United States Chamber of Commerce, had refused to guarantee more than 20 weeks, but had agreed to a concert season of 23 weeks or more depending upon the amount of money raised in the annual drive for a sustaining fund.

The union, it was understood, might be willing to accept 23 weeks' work, though its original demands were for a season of 23 to 27 weeks with a $10 a week increase in base pay. The rate of pay demand was scaled down to $5 through efforts of the conciliation service several weeks ago.

Under consideration by the meeting today will be the directors decision against guaranteeing more than 20 weeks and their acceptance of a deadlock as meaning the orchestra's death.

The union's reported willingness to make some concession on the length of the season, it was felt, might incline the association to modify the stand of the directors.

Unless a settlement is reached the National Symphony's nine-year life may end with this season's final concert in Constitution Hall at 4 p. m., Sunday.

Dog Fancier Limited to One Pet by Decree

Neighbor Complains 8 or 10 Animals Keep Residents Awake

Police Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday decreed that Miss Helen Burche, of 2027 H street northwest, would have to content herself with one pet dog, after neighbors testified that her pets, numbering from three on up, barked all night every night.

Miss Burche was arrested last Friday on a warrant sworn to by Mrs. Hannah Seaquist, of 2025 H street. The warrant charged Miss Burche with 'maintaining a nuisance.'

The complainant testified that Miss Burche "has five dogs of her own, but she gets the dogs of the other neighbors and sometimes has eight or ten. They are out in the street and in the yard at 4 and 5 a. m. keeping everybody awake."

Defense Attorney Michael Colbert asked Mrs. Seaquist whether she was on good terms with Miss Burche. "I'm on good terms with her, but not with her dogs," she replied.

Miss Burche admitted that her dogs barked at times, but insisted they were never out after 11 p. m. Besides, she added, she had only three dogs now.

Spectators roared as Policeman T. H. Ring described his experience with Miss Burche's dogs. Once, he said, he reproached Miss Burche and warned her she'd have to quiet the pets. The following colloquy then took place, he testified:

"'They don't bark,' she said. 'They do,' I said. 'They don't,' she said. 'They do,' I said."

Then the policeman turned to the judge, and continued:

"And, your honor, that's been going on for three years."

Last night Miss Burche had just about decided to keep Snow White, a brown and tan mongrel which is expecting a litter.

N. Y. Fair Pay Row Threatens Stage Show Rehearsals

New York, April 10 (AP).—A contract dispute between the New York World's Fair management and A. F. of L. theatrical unions tonight threatened to stop rehearsals on all stage productions at the fair, which opens next month.

Union officials said that unless the controversy was settled work would stop tomorrow on Billy Rose's Aquacade, Railroads on Parade, Michael Todd's Ventures and the Ford Motor Co. show.

Crux of the dispute was the refusal of the fair to meet demands of Actors Equity Association for a $45 a week scale for ballet dancers and choral singers in the $500,000 "American Jubilee," a patriotic spectacle sponsored by the fair corporation.

Also at issue, however, was the failure of the fair officials and union leaders to reach agreement on a basic contract covering all amusement workers at the fair.

Lawyers Guild Hears NLRB Praised, Hit

Ex-Counsel of Smith Committee, C.I.O. Aide, Law Expert Speak

Defense and attack of the National Labor Relations Board and its investigation by the Smith committee was mingled last night with the verdict of a George Washington University professor who found good points in both sides of the argument at a meeting of the Lawyers Guild in the Public Health Service auditorium.

Roger Robb, former associate general counsel of the committee, attacked trial examiners for assuming a dual role of judge and prosecutor, cited the Wagner Act as "splendid" but lacking, together with the board, public confidence and denied that the board would be unable to function under amendments proposed by House investigators headed by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

Joseph Kovner, assistant general counsel of the C. I. O., charged that the committee "rigged" its newspaper "publicity," admitted instances and "implications" of prejudicial conduct of examiners, but cited the board's record in the courts, and in reduction of number and severity of labor disputes, as evidence that committee testimony was not typical of board methods.

The middleman in the argument was Chester Ward, George Washington University labor law expert, who called the Wagner Act a "truly noble experiment," the "logical and obvious answer to centuries of employer oppression," but suggested consideration of amendments to it.

He proposed that Congress put "more certainty" into the existing law, defining what it meant by collective bargaining and writing into the act mandatory provision for written agreements.

The Labor Board, he pointed out, now regulates "every move" in the bargaining process and he held that the board's entire "structure of rules" doubtless "help the purpose of the act."

"But," he added, "let Congress say what it means and end the need of the board's mind reading."

Kovner questioned the ability of Congress to enact reasonable amendments, but Ward replied that if it could not there is "no sense to democratic government."

St. Peter's Church Rebuilding Plan May Be Speeded

Rebuilding of St. Peter's Catholic Church, the interior of which was destroyed by fire March 27, may begin soon, the Right Rev. Eugene J. Connelly, rector, indicated yesterday.

Work will begin, he said, as soon as the insurance on the structure has been adjusted, and bids placed in the contractors' hands. The project will include the redecorating plans which were being arranged in connection with the golden jubilee celebration of the building of the present edifice. The celebration, set for November 24, also will mark the 120th anniversary of the parish's founding.

St. Peter's, second oldest parish in the city, is holding masses in the parochial school nearby during the renovation. The church is at Second and C streets southeast.

Senate Approves Pay For Rejected Judge

The Senate approved and sent to the White House yesterday legislation allocating $5,166.66 to Floyd H. Roberts, of Bristol, Va., in payment for his services as Federal judge in Virginia from August 1, 1938, to February 6, 1939.

Roberts was given an interim appointment by President Roosevelt, but the Senate rejected his nomination after Senators Glass and Byrd, Virginia Democrats, opposed it.

Glass Surgical Thread Is New Operation Frill

Body Absorbs Fibers, Patent Office Visitors Are Told

By the Associated Press

It soon may be possible to talk about the glass stitches in your operation.

Glass thread which can be drawn as fine as silk and spun into fibers of any thickness promises to be one of the newest developments in surgery, visitors at the Patent Office sesquicentennial celebration were told yesterday.

It is smooth, easy to handle, easily sterilized and is absorbed slowly by the body when used to close deep incisions, said Games Slayter, of Toledo, the inventor.

Some surgeons already have begun using the glass fiber to stitch wounds, he said, after having made extensive experiments with animals.

The spun glass, which is not irritating, is being used for making fabrics and as insulating material.

A new method of recording sound by scratching tiny indentations a few thousandths of an inch deep on clear motion picture film was demonstrated at the Patent Office exhibition by Harry Payne, engineer of the Radio Corporation of America.

Instead of putting transcripts of court trials or business conversations on flat records, he said that the new machine, by tracing lines across the film, would make it possible to put a complete 24-hour record on a strip no longer than the average home movie.

The machine may be used in radio control towers of airports to keep a continuous record of every report and order issued

Cromwell May Tell Plans on April 16

Jersey City, N. J., April 8 (AP).—Frank Eggers, secretary to Mayor Frank Hague, said today James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, probably would announce on April 16 his candidacy for the New Jersey Democratic senatorial nomination.

Eggers said Hague, State Democratic leader, would return here from Miami, Fla., next Monday and that Cromwell was expected to arrive here from Ottawa the following day to confer with Hague.

tubes, and telephone peas were simply peas. Incandescent salad ordinarily would have been avacado pear, except that anchovy paste formed a lamplike filament along the exposed side of each pear.

Snakebite antidote cocktails, all and sundry agreed, would be 100 per cent effective if administered in advance to the snake.

Along the way from the modified version of the snakebite cocktails patented in 1888 by Joshua T. Smith, of Coffee County, Ga., to the speeches was a fashion show. The costumes, representing industries, were truly products of inventive genius; the models were like nothing to be found on file in the Patent Office.

Presented by Thomas Midgley, jr., vice president of the Ethyl Corporation and chairman of the banquet committee, the girls walked across the dais to the strains of Stephen Foster's "Beautiful Dreamer," banquet theme song. Each represented an industry built on inventions patented in the United States.

First came Marjorie Hawthorne as Madame Patents, wearing a pale blue gown covered with facsimiles of United States patents and bearing on her head a gold tiara representing the American eagle. Georgia Carroll, as Miss Accounting Machines, wore black chiffon with an overtone motif of adding machine keys.

Dressed in Celluloid

Miss Photography was represented by Betty McLaughlin, who was dressed in black celluloid covered with strips of film, and Peggy Healy, as Miss Communications, wore a crown of radio bulbs, a bodice of ticker tape and a skirt embroidered with telephone poles and wires.

Miss Chemistry, represented by Katherine Hernan, wore a gown embroidered with chemical formulas, a jacket studded with test tubes and a chemist's retort for a hat, while Gladys Otey, as Miss Automotive, was clad in a gown decorated with automobile instruments and a steering wheel hat.

Miss Foods, whose futuristic peasant dress carried a miniature vegetable garden, was represented by Jyne Cox, and Olive Cawley, in a dress of air route maps and an airplane wing for a collar, was Miss Aviation. Dana Jenny was Miss Publishing; Muriel Maxwell, Miss Metals, and Margaret Horan, Miss Rubber, in a long gown of rubber bands.

The foresight of the Republic's founders in providing protection for inventors, was praised by Noble, who said even had there been no patent law, inventions would have been developed, "for the instinct to create cannot be wholly suppressed."

Commissioner Coe, who pointed out the progress in living that followed protected invention and illustrated how one development followed, helped and was helped by another, urged support for improvements in present patent laws.

"I am not contending," he said, "that man was endowed with inventive talents either by the American system or any other system. I merely accept and repeat the truth which the President has uttered in his (patent anniversary) proclamation, namely, that our patent system has encouraged and protected inventive genius and that by inducement and guarantee has served the common weal . . .

"Had there been since 1790 no greater incentive and requital for inventive abilities than there were before that year the succeeding 15 decades would have been as barren as the century and a half that preceded the inauguration of our patent system.

"A myriad of inventions once temporarily protected by the monopoly of patents are now and for long have been common property and of general utility. Of these and others we might never have had knowledge or advantage but for the inducement and safeguards which our patent laws have provided."

He appealed for reforms in the present patent system represented by two bills now before Congress. One provides for a single Court of Patent Appeals, the other would limit effectiveness of a patent to 20 years from the filing date.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, in a statement in connection with the dinner, said progress since 1790 "particularly in the field of technological development" is largely owing "to enterprising Americans who devoted their lives to making life easier and more efficient for their fellow men."

Dr. Charles F. Kettering, president, General Motors Corporation, was toastmaster. Members of the commission established by Congress to arrange the celebration included Hopkins, Secretary of the Navy Edison, Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the Senate Patent Committee; Senator White (Republican), Maine; Representative Kramer (Democrat), California, chairman of the House Patent Committee; Representative Hartley, jr. (Republican), New Jersey; Dr. Kettering, Coe and Finis J. Garrett, presiding judge of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

Higher Cost Of Living Seen In Patman Bill

J. C. Penney Co. Head Forecasts Upset Of Economic Structure

By the Associated Press

Earle C. Sams, of New York, president of the J. C. Penney Co., told a House Ways and Means sub-committee yesterday that enactment of the Patman chain store bill would increase living costs in the United States and upset the economic structure.

Tax provisions in the measure increase so sharply with the increased size of a chain and in proportion to the number of States in which it operates, Sams said, that not only all large chains such as the Penney system but also many smaller chains operating in several States would be "wiped out."

As originally drafted, he said, the bill would assess taxes totaling $84,000,000 on the J. C. Penney Co., compared with $32,000,000 proposed by an amendment offered by the author of the measure, Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas.

To criticisms of previous witnesses, who said chain stores had not contributed to the cost of government of localities in which they operated, Sams, asserted:

"Survey after survey has shown that the chains actually do pay more taxes in proportion to their business than do most of their competitors.

"Because of the corporate set-up of the Penny Co. our stores' bill for Federal and State and municipal taxes last year totalled $7,000,000. This $7,000,000 is only for taxes paid directly. It does not include a large sum paid indirectly."

Discussing chain store banking, Sams told the committee 76 per cent of the company's funds last year were deposited in over 1,550 banks.

"Furthermore, on the question of bank borrowing," he added, "the J. C. Penny Co. has not borrowed anything from a New York bank in the last four years. Our borrowings have been made from banks scattered throughout the country."

U. S. Seeks Fate Of 113 on Ships In Norse Ports

Officials Fear Peril Of Bombs to Seamen On Trapped Vessels

The State Department last night was attempting to determine the fate of 113 American seamen, including a Washingtonian, aboard three freighters trapped by the war in Norwegian ports.

Officials feared the American ships might be imperiled by the cross-fire and bombing between belligerents. Efforts to contact the vessels were balked by the German and Norwegian communications ban.

At Bergen aboard the Flying Fish, a $2,000,000 vessel recently built by the Maritime Commission and operated by Moore-McCormick Steamship Co., was John Clark, 25-year-old nephew of Dr. and Mrs. Robert W. Baker, of 1827 Jefferson place northwest.

The son of Col. John A. Clark, retired Army medical official now living at Clearwater, Fla., young Clark spent his boyhood in Washington when his father was stationed at Walter Reed Hospital.

Several weeks ago, en route to Norway, he radioed his aunt, she said last night, and concluded his greetings with the words:

"If anything goes wrong you'll learn about it in the papers."

Young Clark is the grandson of Col. Robert Nicholson Scott, and a brother of Lieut. Robert N. S. Clark, of the Navy.

Also at Bergen is the Charles R. McCormick, which arrived Monday with Finnish relief supplies. The Mormacsea is at Trondheim. The Norway-bound Mormacstar and Mormactide have been ordered to return to New York.

Meanwhile plans for removing Americans from Norway and Denmark were laid at the State Department yesterday on the basis of standing instructions given American diplomatic envoys abroad before the European war broke out.

Several routes for Americans wishing to leave the two countries were tentatively agreed on. Among them are:

1—By freighter to England from the Norwegian Atlantic ports of Bergen and Trondheim, and thence to America.

2—South from Oslo to Germany, with the Nazis' permission, and then on down to Italy and out from Genoa, where the United States Line touches. This would suffice likewise for Americans in Denmark.

3—Out direct on two American freighters in port at Bergen. The freighters are being held there temporarily; their capacity is small.

The State Department lists about 1,600 Americans living in Norway and Denmark. Many of these, however, are married to Norwegians or Danes or have close relatives there and do not want to leave. Probably less than half would go.

The department still has available a portion of the $500,000 special fund voted by Congress at the beginning of the European war for the assistance of Americans in Europe. Americans in Norway and Denmark who may be destitute will be advanced funds on their promissory notes.

wegian and Danish assets, the forms to be filled out and returned.

In this way, it was said, the United States Government is helping its own nationals holding Norwegian and Danish assets to protect them selves against possible future claims.

It is simply, official sources said, a kind of special foreign exchange control or supervision designed to preserve the property affected for its rightful owners.

Officials did not know offhand of any precedent for the move. When Czecho-Slovakia and Poland were seized, it was said, the Government simply arranged voluntarily with holders of Czecho-Slovakian and Polish funds to supervise withdrawals to make sure that the money went only to its true owners.

The action taken yesterday was considered in the case of these countries, but was not taken then, it was indicated, due to the fact that voluntary arrangements were believed to be satisfactory.

Official sources had no estimate as to the amount of Norwegian and Danish funds in this country. One object of the "census" was to find out.

From New York came reports that bankers had been worrying, since the invasion of Denmark and Norway, about the problem of ownership of Scandinavian wealth, including gold reserves, sent here for safekeeping during the long period of war scares. The President's order, they said, apparently was intended to stop Germany from seizing the gold and short-term balances of the two countries.

It was estimated that several hundred millions of dollars of readily transferable assets were held in the United States for the account of the Scandinavian countries, the Associated Press said from New York. Sweden, not invaded as yet, sent $66,000,000 in gold to this country in March. Norway, it is said, has shipped more than $33,000,000 in gold to the United States since January 1.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS section 3 of the joint resolution of Congress approved November 4, 1939, provides as follows:

"(a) Whenever the President shall have issued a proclamation under the authority of section 1 (a), and he shall thereafter find that the protection of citizens of the United States so requires, he shall, by proclamation, define combat areas, and thereafter it shall be unlawful, except under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed, for any citizen of the United States or any American vessel to proceed into or thorugh any such combat area. The combat areas so defined may be made to apply to surface or aircraft, or both.

"(b) In case of the violation of any of the provisions of this section by any American vessel, or any owner or officer thereof, such vessel, owner, or officer shall be fined not more than $50,000 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both. Should the owner of such a vessel be a corporation, organization, or association, each officer or director participating in the violation shall be liable to the penalty herelnabove prescribed. In case of the violation of this section by any citizen traveling as a passenger, such passenger may be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than two years, or both.

"(c) The President may from time to time modify or extend any proclamation issued under the authority of this section, and when the conditions which shall have caused him to issue any such proclamation shall have ceased to exist he shall revoke such proclamation and the provision of this section shall thereupon cease to apply, except as to offenses committed prior to such revocation."

AND WHEREAS it is further provided by section 13 of the said joint resolution that

"The President may, from time to time, promulgate such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with law as may be necessary and proper to carry out any of the provisions of this joint resolution; and he may exercise any power or authority conferred on him by this joint resolution through such officer or officers, or agency or agencies, as he shall direct."

AND WHEREAS on November 4, 1939, I issued a proclamation in accordance with the provision of law quoted above defining a combat area.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority conferred in me by section three of the joint resolution of Congress approved November 4, 1939, do hereby find that the protection of citizens of the United States requires that there be an extension of the combat area defined in my proclamation of November 4, 1939, through or into which extended combat area it shall be unlawful, except under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed, for any citizen of the United States or any American vessel, whether a surface vessel or an aircraft, to proceed.

All the navigable waters within the limits set forth hereafter.

Beginning at the intersection of the north coast of Spain with the meridian of 2° 45' longitude west of Greenwich;

Thence due north to a point in 43° 54' north latitude;

Thence by a rhumb line to a point in 45° north latitude, 20° west longitude;

Thence due north to 58° north latitude;

Thence by a rhumb line to a point in 76° 30' north latitude, 16° 35' east longitude;

Thence by a rhumb line to a point in 70° north latitude, 44° east longitude;

Thence due south to the mainland of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics;

Thence along the coastline of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, Finland, Norway, Sweden, the Baltic Sea and dependent waters thereof, Germany, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium, France and Spain to the point of beginning.

And I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States, charged with the execution of the laws thereof, the utmost diligence in preventing violations of the said joint resolution and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same.

And I do hereby delegate to the Secretary of State the power or authority conferred on me by the said joint resolution as made effective by this my proclamation issued thereunder, which is not specifically delegated by Executive order to some other officer or agency of this Government, and the power to promulgate such rules and regulations not inconsistent with law as may be necessary and proper to carry out any of its provisions.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

DONE at the City of Washington this tenth day of April, in the year of our Lord 1940, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the one hundred and sixty-fourth.

(Seal.)

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

By the President:

CORDELL HULL.
Secretary of State.

PROVIDED, HOWEVER, that the exceptions authorized by paragraph numbered 2 of the regulations promulgated on November 6, 1939, shall not apply to American vessels which have cleared for a port or ports in the combat area but which had not entered that area prior to the date of these regulations.

War Will Engulf All Small European Neutrals, Envoy Says

By Frazier Hunt

International News Service Staff Writer

London, April 10.—Every small European neutral will be engulfed in the whirlpool of war within six months.

This was the flat statement made tonight by one of the most important neutral envoys in London, whose name is known throughout the world, but which for reasons of state canot be disclosed publicly.

"Probabilities are that Holland and Belgium will be next," he explained.

"Once the Allies succeed in establsihing a front in Scandinavia and become deeply involved, then Germay probably will feel compelled to make a lightning stroke in Belgium and Holland.

No matter what happens in Norway, the war is boiling up to such a furious point that action involving the Low Countries is inevitable."

The diplomat pointed out that Britain almost overnight abandoned her soft-heartedness and became grimly determined to carry on the war at any cost—as a result of which Britain may be forced to do things which normally would be repugnant.

"The day of small neutrals is over," he said. "We must be prepared to expect more surprises at least as startling as the invasion of Norway and Denmark."

All American Credits and Balances Of Two Countries and Their Nationals Are Frozen by White House Action

By virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 5 (b) of the act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 411), as amended by Section 2 of the act of March 9, 1933 (48 Stat. 1), and by virtue of all other authority vested in me, I Franklin D. "a. "b. All payments by any banking institution within the United States;

"c. All transactions in foreign exchange by any person within the United States;

"Section 10. Additional reports. "a. Reports under oath shall be filed on such forms, at such time or times and from time to time, and by such persons, as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, with respect to all property of any nature whatsoever of which Norway or Denmark or any national thereof is or was the owner, or in which Norway or Denmark or any national thereof has or had an interest of any nature whatsoever, direct or indirect, and with respect to any acquisition, transfer, disposition, or any other dealing in such property.

"B. The Secretary of the Treasury may require the furnishing under oath of additional and supplemental information, including the production of any books of account, contracts, letters or other papers with respect to the matters concerning which reports are required to be filed under this section.

"Section 11. Additional definitions. In addition to the definitions contained in section 7, the following definitions are prescribed:

"A. The terms 'Norway' and 'Denmark,' respectively, mean the state and the government of Norway and Denmark on April 8, 1940, and any political subdivisions, agencies and instrumentalities thereof, including territories, dependencies and possessions, and all persons acting or purporting to act directly or indirectly for the benefit or on behalf of the foregoing. The terms 'Norway' and 'Denmark,' respectively, shall also include any and all other governments (including political subdivisions, agencies and instrumentalities thereof and persons acting or purporting to act directly or indirectly for the benefit or on behalf thereof) to the extent and only to the extent that such governments exercise or claim to exercise de jure or de facto sovereignty over the area which, on April 8, 1940, constituted Norway or Denmark.

"B. The term 'national' of Norway or Denmark shall include any person who has been or whom there is reasonable cause to believe has been domiciled in, or a subject, citizen or resident of Norway or Denmark at any time since April 8, 1940, but shall not include any individual domiciled and residing in the United States on April 8, 1940, and shall also include any partnership, association, or other organization, including any corporation organized under the laws of, or which on April 8, 1940, had its principal place of business in Norway or Denmark or which on or after such date has been controlled by, or a substantial part of the stock, shares, bonds, debentures, or other securities of which has been owned or controlled by, directly or indirectly, one or more persons, who have been, or whom there is reasonable cause to believe have been, domiciled in, or the subjects, citizens or residents of Norway or Denmark at any time on or since April 8, 1940, and all persons acting or purporting to act directly or indirectly for the benefit or on behalf of the foregoing.

C. The term "banking institution" as used in section nine includes any person engaged primarily or incidentally in the business of banking, of granting or transferring credits, or of purchasing or selling foreign exchange or procuring purchasers and sellers thereof, as principal or agent, or any person holding credits for others as a direct or incidental part of his business, or brokers; and, each principal, agent, home office, branch or correspondent of any person so engaged shall be regarded as a separate "banking institution."

Section 12. Additional regulations of November 12, 1934, are hereby modified insofar as they are inconsistent with the provisions of sections 9 to 11, inclusive, of this order, and except as so modified are hereby continued in full force and effect. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and empowered to prescribe from time to time regulations to carry out the purposes of sections 9 to 11, inclusive, of this order as amended, and to provide in such regulations or by rulings made pursuant thereto, the conditions under which licenses may be granted by such agencies as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate.

Uniform Charge for RED CAP PORTER SERVICE

In order to improve and standardize Red Cap porter service to the public, the Washington Terminal Company announces that, effective April 15, it will make a flat charge of 10 cents for each bag or parcel carried at Union Station, Washington, D. C. This will place the porter service upon the same basis, with reference to uniform price, as now prevails in the parcel room and locker service.

By thus substituting a fixed payment plan for the custom of tipping, with its accompanying irregularities in the amounts paid, the Washington Terminal Company will be able to place its Red Caps on a uniform wage basis. In addition, the new plan will eliminate controversies and legal complications which have arisen under recent Federal legislation regarding the status of Red Caps as employes and the status of tips as compensation for their work.

THE PLAN WORKS THIS WAY:

Passengers requiring the service of a Red Cap will have an identification check attached to each bag or parcel by the porter, while an identically numbered stub will be handed the passenger. When the porter has carried the baggage to train, taxicab or elsewhere, as directed, he will collect the stubs, together with 10 cents for each bag or parcel handled, and this will constitute payment in full for the service rendered. Red Cap porters will provide this service as employes of the Washington Terminal Company and will act as its agents in collecting the charges made therefor.

The fixed payment plan for Red Cap service is in successful operation elsewhere. It has received the stamp of full public approval and is functioning with entire satisfaction to all concerned. In adopting this plan for Union Station, Washington, D. C., the Washington Terminal Company does so with the confidence it will make the service much more efficient and attractive to the traveling public.

Wave Bombing Raid Repulsed At Scapa Flow

Nazis Lose 4 Planes In 'Most Murderous' Attack on Naval Base

By The Associated Press

London (Thursday), April 11.—Waves of German bombers last night attacked Scapa Flow in what observers described as the "most murderous raid yet made" on that great British naval base, but the raiders officially were reported beaten off with costly losses.

Four big black warplanes were shot down, the British said, and two others were so riddled that they probably failed to get home.

Previously two Heinkel bombers officially were reported shot down in Moray Firth, extreme north Scotland, in an attempted attack on a convoy. Two others may have been destroyed in the same engagement, bringing the possible German losses over Britain to ten during the day.

The Germans staged their attack on Scapa Flow in force while the Allied fleet was spreadeagling German naval units in Scandinavian waters.

Two Towns Machinegunned

Circling over the Orkneys in large and small formations, the German bombers dropped many high-explosive bombs in the anchorage and machinegunned the towns of Kirkwall and Stromness. One man was wounded.

One witness said the bombs fell "miles wide" of the warships, although a few splashed near some trawlers. The official report said no ships were damaged.

Kirkwall is a contraband control port where many neutral ships are taken for examination of their cargoes.

Circling in large and small formations, the bombers ran into the heavy fire of antiaircraft batteries, which shot down three of the four victims.

Inhabitants saw British pursuit planes engage in spectacular dog fights, the pursuiters streaking across a moonlit sky to chase the bombers into the barrages of hot metal from the antiaircraft guns.

Gas Tank Fired

The air ministry earlier reported that two Royal Air Force fighters fired a refueling tank on a Norwegian airdrome yesterday, destroyed a German bomber and badly damaged two others.

On their return flight to their base, the air ministry said the British craft engaged still another German bomber which "is unlikely to have reached home."

Meanwhile, scouting units from the fleet aircraft carriers and Royal Air Force planes completed a widespread reconnaissance over German fleet and army positions and lines of communication.

The British said "several enemy aircraft" were bagged over the rugged Norwegian coast. British planes were also reported from Stockholm to have battled German planes over Oslo and over Oslo-Fjord.

Chiang's Son Enters U. S. Air Corps School

Montgomery, Ala., April 10 (AP).—Youthful Lieut. Wego Chiang, second son of China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, entered the U. S. Air Corps School at Maxwell Field today for 12 weeks of intensive training in advanced aerial war tactics.

Gov. Frank M. Dixon, who greeted Chiang and J. Z. Huang, of the Chinese Embassy staff, offered them "any assistance I may be able to give during your stay." The young flier and Huang motored here from Washington.

British Fight Way to Oslo

was reported sunk by the guns of the coastal fortress at Horten in Oslo Fjord and, by the cruiser and minelayer. Olaf Tryggvason, Norway's newest and largest warship. The Olaf Tryggvason is of 1,596 tons and carries four 4.7-inch guns.

The report did not say precisely whether one of the famous 10,000-ton pocket battleships, Deutschland or Admiral Scheer, was involved.

A later report said, however, the 5,400-ton Germar cruiser Emden was believed to be the German warship sunk by the Olaf Tryggvason. This ship was identified first as a German destroyer, and later as a pocket battleship.

Heavy air fighting accompanied the naval action in the fjord and a German destroyer which ran aground was bombed by British planes.

Heartened by the British navy's powerful thrust, the Norwegians themselves were reported by Swedish newspapers to have wiped out some German units attempting to take Elverum, village 75 miles north of Oslo, to which place the Norwegian government finally fled when the capital was occupied by the Germans. Two hundred Norwegians were reported slain in the battle.

Hundreds of German dead were reported left on the field after a force of Norwegian soldiers, aided by hastily armed volunteers, struck back at the invaders.

Reuters said that the German attacks against Norwegian forces yesterday at Elverum were repulsed "all along the line" and that there had been no further clashes for more than eight hours.

The Norwegian government and army general staff were reported to have taken all their archives intact from Oslo to Elverum. The bank of Norway was reported also to have got all its gold and bank notes out safely.

The Stockholf radio said the British had sunk a German warship near Arendal, off Norway's south coast, where a German troop transport was torpedoed Monday, before the actual invasion began.

That the Germans were having difficulty in Oslo Fjord, water gateway to the capital which supposedly was cleared of opposition yesterday, was indicated earlier today in the distress signals of the German steamer Curityba.

The messages said she was being fired on by coastal batteries at Nyviken, deep in the fjord.

Tonight, German planes were reported to have resorted to bombing small towns in the vicinity of the Fjord.

Huge fires were set in Drammen, Drobak and Oskarsborg with the Norwegians apparently still in possession of the towns. Important fortifications near Oskarsborg were forced Monday by German warships.

Norwegian military quarters issued a communique saying 200 Germans were killed in the battle at Elverum.

Earlier, the Germans had occupied the parade ground at Gardemoen, near Eidsvold, 30 miles north of Oslo. A large force of Norwegians which was ordered to occupy the ground, failed to reach it before the Germans, who were transported by bus. Five hundred Norwegians were surprised near Eidsvold and disarmed without a fight.

The royal family was safe at Elverum.

Bloody battling was reported between the Norwegians and Germans at Skarnes, 40 miles south of Elverum and only 30 miles from the Swedish border.

Details of the German occupation drifted into Sweden from the thousands of Norwegians taking refuge on this side of the border.

Eyewitness accounts of the attack by planes and warships on Kristiansand fortress, on the south coast, said the streets were filled with granite splinters and the spire of the cathedral was shot down.

Crying women and children filled the air raid shelters for three hours until the fortress fell. Three or four buildings were set afiame.

As many as 150 planes took part in the Oslo occupation, other eyewitnesses reported, some of them ferrying 400 German soldiers armed with machine-guns and grenades.

About 120 Norwegian soldiers were reported killed in this operation.

The Trondheim occupation was led by the German consul there.

Norway lost her two largest warships, the 4,166-ton Norge and Eidsvold, when the Germans seized Narvik, early yesterday in a snowstorm.

Five hundred men of their crews were drowned or killed in the short-lived action.

A Norwegian customs officer who boarded an incoming German whale oil ship discovered the Germans aboard were disguised soldiers, but was prevented from giving an alarm.

Then two German destroyers hove in view through the blizzard and opened fire on the Norge and Eidsvold when they attempted to resist.

A British steamer was sunk in the harbor.

In the occupation of Stavanger, a Norwegian torpedo boat sank a German steamer.

5. Germany acknowledged that the 10,000-ton heavy cruiser Blucher and the 6,000-ton cruiser Karlsruhe were sunk yesterday by Norwegian shore batteries as the Germans landed troops on the Norwegian southeast coast.

6. The admiralty asserted that a British submarine torpedoed a German cruiser off south Norway last night and that "it is thought the cruiser was sunk."

The royal navy bid high for Narvik. More than 300 men may have been lost.

Five destroyers of the Hero class stormed the Narvik fjord at dawn, engaging the six German destroyers, and running into heavy fire from coastal batteries and German guns newly mounted there.

In this initial thrust, Prime Minister Chamberlain told Commons, Britain lost two destroyers and had two damaged, one seriously; one German destroyer was said to have been torpedoed and believed sunk and three others were left "heavily hit and burning."

The German ships were left "in no position to attempt pursuit," he said.

(Berlin claimed that three British destroyers were sunk in the action, but a late communique failed to mention German casualties.)

Commons, which listened in silence as Chamberlain told of the British losses at Narvik, cheered wildly as he continued to relate the damage to the German ships and to tell of the sinking of seven vessels believed to be carrying supplies or munitions for the Germans.

The British claimed in addition that a Royal Air Force plane had bombed and severely damaged a German cruiser of the 6,000-ton Koln class off Bergen, Norway, and that British planes had hit another cruiser three times with bombs as she lay in Bergen roadstead.

If the Koln class cruiser was put out of action this class is extinct, at least temporarily. Norwegian shore batteries sank the 6,000-ton Karlsruhe off Kristiansand yesterday, and the admiralty announced last December 18 that the third ves-

Members of Parliament cheered like schoolboys when Chamberlai[illegible] recounted the damage to the Ge[illegible] man destroyers.

(No such ship is listed in Lloyd[illegible] registry of shipping, but neutr[illegible] shipping circles thought Chamberlain might have referred to th[illegible] 8,460-ton German freighter Rauenfels, out of Bremen.)

Up to the Navy

To neutral naval attaches the success or failure of the British counterpunch to the German occupation of Norway lies with the navy.

Presented for the first time with the opportunity to hit the Nazi fleet, Britain's ships must destroy it and cut the lines of communications. Unless they do, Germany not only will be able to consolidate a conquest of Norway but may operate on sea and in the air from bases on the west coast of Norway within uncomfortable striking distance of North Britain.

Despite the fragmentary and confusing reports of losses in the naval battles, British sources said there was every indication that Germany had, at least, lost enough tonnage to cripple her naval forces and render them impotent as a striking force for the rest of the war.

Today's battles, when the whole story is told, may padlock the German fleet in Kiel and Wilhelmshaven just as the battle of Jutland did in 1916.

3 New, Speedy Plane Models Freed for Sale

Allies Held Unlikely To Obtain Delivery In Numbers for Year

By The Associated Press

The War Department cleared the way yesterday for future large-scale deliveries of American-made fighting planes to the British and French by releasing for export three of the latest model pursuit craft.

Coincident with the spectacular new turn in the European war, manufacturers were told they were free to negotiate foreign contracts for the Lockheed P-38, Bell P-39 and Curtiss P-40D.

All are described as very fast planes and are designed especially to cope with bombers and fight off enemy pursuit craft.

Official authority to sell the planes abroad came after two weeks of negotiations by which the Air Corps agreed to accept later deliveries of the same models, with improvements.

The agreement was in accord with a new policy which Secretary Woodring told Congressional committees would protect the Army's investment and assure the most advanced models for the expanding Air Corps. The agreement was the first break in a long delay by the Allied purchasing mission in placing contracts for aircraft and engines estimated to cost $1,000,000,000.

The mission's head, Arthur B. Purvis, conferred yesterday with Secretary Morgenthau, Administration coordinator of war orders.

Though the Allies were represented as especially eager to obtain the most advanced fighters as quickly as possible to reinforce their air defense, prospects appeared slender for early deliveries.

Danes Orderly As Nazis Rule Copenhagen

Business Proceeds As Usual; Only Key Sections Guarded

By the United Press

Copenhagen, Denmark, April 10.—Three members of the Danish Palace Guard and four civilians were reported killed in the yard of the royal palace when the entire palace guard, headed by Prince Waldemar, resisted the German occupation of Copenhagen.

The Nazi soldiers, first foreign troops to occupy this city in Danish history, broke the resistance of the palace corps only after a sharp skirmish. Prince Waldemar and the entire guard were arrested.

Unconfirmed reports told of fighting south of Jutland, where a detachment of possibly 200 Danish soldiers were said to have resisted. Several were reported to have been killed in the fighting which occurred because the order not to resist the German occupation had not reached them in time.

German sources said that only 12 persons had been killed throughout Denmark in the course of the occupation. The third Danish Royal Hussars corps of Copenhagen, however, was reported to have left the city on Tuesday and has not been heard from since.

Danes Orderly

By the Associated Press

Copenhagen, April 10.—The German occupation of Copenhagen moved ahead with clockwork-like regularity today, but most of the city's sunny streets showed no sign that a powerful alien war machine was controlling the country's destinies.

Mud-splattered field cars, trucks and other war transport vehicles moved into the city with green-clad warriors of the Reich aboard, but they were quickly absorbed in the busy capital of the kingdom which came under German sway only yesterday.

German sentries and machine-gun units guarded strategic points in some sections, but on most streets in the business districts there were only the usual crowds of pedestrians. German soldiers guarded the Hotel Angleterre, where Englishmen usually stayed and where afternoon tea is an institution. German officers took over part of the hotel's accommodations, but tea went on as usual today.

Youngsters Eye Trucks

Wide-eyed Danish youngsters crowded around German tanks and tried to chat with the soldiers and examine their equipment. Whenever the crowd grew too large Danish police broke it up.

Danish passersby usually paused on the opposite side of the street to watch the German sentries, but there were no displays of ill will. Whatever they thought the Danes kept it to themselves, and the traffic flowed on as ever.

There was little question that the German army was well established in the city by nightfall.

Reich Strives to Strengthen Grip on Scandinavian Control

Germany Claims 4 British Battleships, 5 Cruisers, 4 Destroyers and 2 Transports Badly Damaged by Aerial Attackers

By Russell Hill.

Berlin, April 10.—The fate of Norway hung in the balance tonight as the Nazi invaders tried to speed up the securing of their footholds on Norwegian soil, and at the same time repulse Allied attacks on the sea and in the air.

While Berlin was boasting this morning that it had saved Scandinavia from the war, tonight it contemplated the possibility of a tough fight with England and France, as well as with the Norwegians, before it had won the right "to protect" their country.

Control 7 Towns

Although the high command announced that "the further occupation of Norway is proceeding rapidly and according to plan," the only town reported taken today is Hamar, 70 miles north of Oslo. Thus, according to the Germans' own accounts, they control no more than seven Norwegian towns. Reports that Bergen and Trondheim have fallen to the Allies are denied here.

It is evident that the actual territory occupied by the Germans is relatively small and it appears that they are being held in check and prevented from advancing by small bands of Norwegian forces.

Germany Strengthens Position

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, April 10.—Nazi Germany, fighting furiously with her fleet to keep Allied men o' war from the Norwegian coast, tonight strove systematically to get her bearings in the two Scandinavian countries which Adolf Hitler is "protecting" against their will.

Tonight, the German battle-score in the new theater of sea and air war stood:

Four British destroyers sunk; four British battleships, two battle cruisers, three heavy cruisers and two transports badly damaged (mainly by air bombing).

Germans Concede 2 Cruisers

Two German cruisers, the new 10,000-ton Bluecher and the 6,000-ton Karlsruhe, sunk by Norway's shore batteries in Oslo Fjord and at Kristiansand, respectively, while covering troop landings yesterday.

Within Denmark and Norway, here was the German picture today:

Denmark: "Order reigns supreme."

Norway: German forces occupied Hamar, Norwegian lake town north of Oslo to which the Nygaarsvold government of Norway first fled, while the German minister, Breuer, tried to cut the Gordian knot of conflicting claims of authority in Norway by visiting King Haakon himself and asking him who he considers premier, Johan Nygaarsvold or Vidkum Quisling, the Norwegian Nazi who yesterday proclaimed a regime. German spokesmen were confident that a "mutually satisfactory" agreement with Norway would be reached within a few hours.

Shore Batteries Cited

The high command disclosed today what perhaps was the most dramatic incident of the occupation—the furious defense by Norwegian shore batteries which sank the two German cruisers.

Describing the destruction of the Bluecher, the high command said it was showered by shells from Oslo Fjord coastal guns until it was badly damaged, but it drove ahead on its mission of protecting transports until it ran into Norwegian mines, where it sank in a thunder of explosions.

Similarly, the much older Karlsruhe was shelled at Kristiansand until it went down, but not until it had protected landing parties. Most members of both crews were reported saved.

Danish Troops Fight

Recapitulating yesterday's events, official statements also disclosed that some Danish units, which had not received non-resistance orders from Danish commands, fought until they were overpowered. Previously the occupation of Denmark was reported effected without resistance.

In Berlin, German authorities insisted they did not intend to interfere with the internal affairs of either Denmark or Norway—except where military questions or Germany's security is involved.

Authorized sources, obviously with an eye toward reassuring American public opinion, categorically renounced any interest in Iceland, or in Greenland.

Far more evasive, however, were statements about whether North Schleswig was included in what Denmark will get back after the war, under the German pledge to respect her territorial integrity.

In the German view, Schleswig is German property, illegally handed over to Denmark by the Treaty of Versailles.

Significantly, German accounts of the troop entry into Denmark featured ovations in North Schleswig from the German element.

Economically, Denmark and Norway become real dependencies of Germany for the duration of the war.

Heretofore Denmark exported 55 per cent of her products, mostly agricultural, to England and 38 per cent to Germany. That she will supply only Germany now is self-evident.

As one spokesman observed gleefully: "The British won't get Danish bacon any longer."

The same thing is true of Norway. As for Sweden, it was said there would be no interference if she saw her way clear to shipping non-contraband goods to Germany's enemies.

Government Votes Iceland Independence

British Protection For Island Likely Until End of War

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 10.—The Iceland Parliament, oldest in the world, tonight advised Britain that henceforth it will take over all Icelandic powers formerly held by King Christian of Denmark.

Since Christian, as the former king of both Denmark and Iceland, is now under the domination of Germany, the Iceland Parliament passed the following two resolutions which were handed to the foreign office:

"Firstly, having regard to the fact that the situation created makes it impossible for His Majesty, the King of Iceland, to execute the royal power given to him under constitutional act, the Althing (Iceland Parliament) declares the government of Iceland is for the time being entrusted with the conduct of said power.

"Secondly, having regard to the situation now created, Denmark is not in a position to execute its authority to take charge of the foreign affairs of Iceland granted to it by the provisions of Article 7 of the Danish-Icelandic union act. . . . The Althing declares that Iceland will for the time being take entire charge of said affairs."

Gets British Protection

For the duration of the war, at least, it is now expected that Iceland will come under the protection of the British navy though no action is likely to be taken by Britain that is not desired by Iceland officials.

In time of peace Iceland divides its supply of fish mainly between Britain and Germany. Since the start of the war, however, it has been forced to sell it all to Britain and in view of the German invasion of Denmark it is likely that Iceland will make greater efforts to increase its shipments of fish to the Allies.

Problems growing out of German military occupation of Denmark, including the status of Greenland, Danish colony in the Western Hemisphere, and of Iceland were discussed yesterday in a White House conference by President Roosevelt and the Danish Minister, Henrik Kauffmann.

"We agreed, of course, that Greenland belongs to the American continent," the Minister said as he left the Executive Mansion.

As a result of establishment of German "protectorate" over Iceland, Germany for the first time in history has at least a token claim to authority over territory under in this hemisphere. In addition, many circles the opinion was expressed that the Monroe Doctrine would be invoked with regard to Germany, should this eventually prove necessary but that no definite step through to this effect would be made in the moment.

Halifax Warns Soviet Against Helping Germany Too Much

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 10.—If Norway concluded peace with Germany under Nazi guns, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax told a luncheon audience today, the Allies would regard the treaty as having the same validity as a contract obtained under duress.

Such a compact, he declared, would have not the slightest effect upon the Allied determination to restore Norwegian independence and drive German strategic power from the North Sea and the Atlantic "which it would be impossible for this country to accept."

Nor was this passage of his speech before the National Defense Public Interest Committee the Foreign Secretary's only contribution to clarification of the British and French policy in the light of German activity in Scandinavia.

In it he uttered words of advice to threatened neutrals and a stern sharp warning to Russia that her future relations with the Allies would be governed solely by the extent of the effective help she had decided to extend to the Reich. Other neutrals he admonished that upon the outcome of the war depended not only the fate of the belligerents but of all peoples who "love liberty and wish to protect [illegible] independence."

It was impossible in the present state of uncertainty, to judge Hitler's motive for extending the war to Scandinavia, Halifax said, but he said it was possible that it indicated "some internal weakness" of which the Allies are unaware. At any rate, he said, he was certain the result would not be of "unmixed advantage to the Nazis."

The occupation of Denmark and Norway amply demonstrated that neither treaties nor impeccable neutrality provided any safety against expediency of the German policy, he said. It was quite in keeping with that policy, he said, for Germany to choose as objects of attack those not powerful enough to defend themselves.

To other neutrals which, like Sweden and Rumania, are trying to maintain a not too easy neutrality, Halifax addressed especially the following words:

"This country or France could at any moment during the last six months have occupied any port or base in Norway that we chose. It is easy to make aggressive war when, like Germany, one is more scrupulous. This kind of [illegible] been, or whom to think, is inexcusable cause to betray state been, domiciled in, or [illegible] subjects, citizens or residents of Norway or Denmark at any time on or since April 8, 1940, and all persons acting or purporting to act directly or indirectly for the benefit or on behalf of the foregoing.

C. The term "banking institution" as used in section nine includes any person engaged primarily or incidentally in the business of banking, of granting or transferring credits, or of purchasing or selling foreign exchange or procuring purchasers and sellers thereof, as principal or agent, or any person holding credits for others as a direct or incidental part of his business, or brokers; and, each principal, agent, home office, branch or correspondent of any person so engaged shall be regarded as a separate "banking institution."

Section 12. Additional regulations of November 12, 1934, are hereby modified insofar as they are inconsistent with the provisions of sections 9 to 11, inclusive, of this order, and except as so [illegible]

pursuant to this order, if involving property in which Norway or Denmark or any national thereof has at any time on or since April 8, 1940, had any interest of any nature whatsoever, direct or indirect:

"a. All transfers of credits between any banking institutions within the United States; and all transfers of credit between any banking institution within the United States and any banking institution outside the United States (including any principal, agent, home office, branch, or correspondent outside of the United States, of a banking institution within the United States);

"b. All payments by any banking institution within the United States;

"c. All transactions in foreign exchange by any person within the United States;

"d. The export or withdrawal from the United States, or the earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency by any person within the United States; and

"e. Any transaction for the purpose or which has the effect of evading or avoiding the foregoing prohibitions.

"Section 10. Additional reports. "a. Reports under oath shall be filed on such forms, at such time or times and from time to time, and by such persons, as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, with respect to all property of any nature whatsoever of which Norway or Denmark or any national thereof is or was the owner, or in which Norway or Denmark or any national thereof has or had an interest of any nature whatsoever, direct or indirect, and with respect to any acquisition, transfer, disposition, or any other dealing in such property.

"B. The Secretary of the Treasury may require the furnishing under oath of additional and supplemental information, including the production of any books of account, contracts, etc.

Norse 'to Fight To Utmost,' Envoy Says

'Tried to Uphold Neutrality,' Asserts Diplomat Bitterly

With clenched fists and a break in his voice, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, Norway's Minister to the United States, declared yesterday in the quiet drawing room of his legation that his countrymen would "fight with their utmost strength to defend the liberty and integrity" of their homeland.

Dressed in a blue serge suit of conservative cut, the Minister received correspondents and admitted to them, "I have no direct information from home. Communication is very difficult, to say the least."

Fudgeting with a pair of horn-rimmed glasses, the tall, graying diplomat spoke a message to Americans:

"Norway has from the very beginning of the European war tried to uphold its neutrality without fear or favor . . .

"It was our idea that civilization was progressing," he said bitterly. "Perhaps we were mistaken."

"You remember how we tried to uphold international law in the Altmark and the City of Flint incidents. (The Altmark, a German prison ship, was boarded by British sailors in Norwegian waters and British captives were released. The City of Flint, an American freighter on which Germany had placed a prize crew, was turned over by Norway to its American officers and the German crew interned.)

"In spite of that we have been forced to take up arms," Morgenstierne continued.

He recalled that he first came to the legation 30 years ago next month.

"Thus I felt strongly that in our fight we will have the generous sympathy of Americans in this country, where such a large part of our race has found a home," he said.

Proudly, the Minister said that his legation would never solicit contributions of assistance from the American people. However, he added that many telegrams and letters offering aid and sympathy have been received and all contributions will be forwarded to the Norwegian government.

On one topic the Minister was definite and outspoken, in vilifying the government of Maj. Vidkum Quisling, which German sources reported to have been established in Norway.

Quisling, said Morgenstierne, is a leader of the Norwegian Nazi party which has never been able to elect a single delegate to Parliament.

"I will only recognize a government formed by a popular majority of our people in a free election," the Minister said firmly.

House Unit Delays Action on D.C. Vote

An attempt to tack the suffrage amendment onto the bill may be made when the measure reaches the full District Committee.

Both Representatives Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, were absent when the action was taken. Present were Chairman Kennedy and Representatives Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and George J. Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Previously, opponents of suffrage on the subcommittee had indicated a willingness to report out the suffrage amendment without recommendation.

The Senate yesterday passed a dozen District bills, eight of which have been approved by the House.

One of the Senate bills extends to the residents of the District the right to sue and be sued in the United States District Court, a right held by citizens of the States. Another enlarges the permanent police force of the White House 20 men.

Both have passed the House. Enlargement of the White House force to 80 men takes 20 Metropolitan police, assigned temporarily to the White House, off the District payroll.

The Senate also approved a bill passed by the House to change the name of 3500 block of Twenty-fourth street northwest, an unlinked segment of the thoroughfare in Rock Creek Park, to Williamsburg Lane.

Authority for garages to place liens on automobiles on which storage charges are unpaid.

Requirement that all dwellings be connected with the city's sewage lines.

A minor amendment to the life insurance act.

Authorization for the commissioners to accept a police memorial fountain.

Amendment of the unemployment act to exempt newsboys.

Authority for the Capital Transit Co. to build a waiting room at Commodore Barney Circle.

While the reorganization bill was still locked in subcommittee, Representative Kennedy introduced a bill to retain for the recorder of deeds' office the recording of liens against motor vehicles.

Kennedy's bill, which is contrary to a measure before his subcommittee to set up a special division of the department of vehicles and traffic for the recording of the liens, provides that the recorder of deeds shall deliver daily certified copies of such liens to the traffic director.

$967,414,878 Naval Outlay Approved by Subcommittee

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate naval appropriations subcommittee yesterday approved an outlay of $967,414,878 for the Navy next year and gave approval to the immediate construction of two 45,000-ton battleships.

Chairman Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, said the group had carefully studied a House recommendation that the new dreadnaughts be postponed until the high command can determine whether they should not be replaced by "superbattleships" of 65,000 tons or more. He said the committee had decided the construction program should go forward without delay.

Meanwhile, without waiting for Congress to vote the funds, the Navy Department called for bids on eight ships of next year's building program.

The subcommittee increased the naval aviation program by adding $10,000,000 in contractual authority for the purchase of new warplanes for the aircraft carrier Hornet now building. The actual cash fund for new planes was cut from $46,000,000 to $41,000,000, but the authority to contract for all planes was boosted from $10,000,000 to $25,000,000.

A 5,000-man increase in Navy enlisted strength approved by the House was disallowed. This would have raised the total to 150,000. Chairman Byrnes said the committee would urge in its report that the Navy call for volunteers from the naval reserve for neutrality patrol duty rather than enlist regulars for six-year terms.

The bill is $642,000 above the figure approved by the House but $119,896,699 below President Roosevelt's total budget recommendations. For additional shipbuilding facilities at navy yards to permit the ship program to be accelerated proposed in a supplemental estimate, the committee allowed $8,042,000.

In anticipating passage of the bill so as to get an early start on the 1941 building program, the Navy called for bids on two light cruisers of 10,000 tons and for the machinery for six new submarines and to replace the engines of three craft now in service. Bids were opened at the same time on the engines for two seaplane tenders of the 1941 program.

French Told Nazi Invasion Is Doomed

No Iron Ore Will Leave Narvick, Reynaud Asserts in Senate

By the Associated Press

Paris, April 10.—Premier Reynaud told a tense French Senate today that Germany's "Horse of Troy" move into Norway to save the Nazis' vital iron ore route from northern Scandinavia was doomed.

The Senators, many of whom came to sit in secret judgment of Reynaud's war policies, cheered instead as the Premier addressed the open session substituted for the scheduled closed sitting, which for the second time has been postponed—until April 16—because of rapid war developments.

Reynaud asserted that a great part of the German fleet now was "exposed" to the Allied sea forces and "those German ships that penetrated Norwegian ports are blocked there."

He told how German combatants dressed as merchant seamen had changed into battle dress and landed in Norway, adding, "the immediate future will tell what befalls these sailors who used the Horse of Troy strategy . . . but whatever happens henceforth we can affirm that not one ton of iron ore will leave Narvik for Germany."

(The "Horse of Troy" reference apparently was to reports, such as were told by Norwegian refugees reaching Sweden, that German troops had been carried secretly into Narvik Harbor aboard whaling ships.)

Reynaud went on to list the advantages he said accrued to the Allies from the German move into Norway.

He said Germany depended on Sweden for half her peacetime iron ore needs and that the most practical route, that through Narvik, was now definitely cut by the Allies.

"Once the ephemeral economic plunder from the invasion is devoured," said Reynaud, "Germany can no longer provision herself through Denmark and Norway.

"Hitler, who boasted many times of not scattering his forces from a single front," continued Reynaud, "must now distract men and material to attempt to prevent the strangulation of his iron route."

Reynaud did not reveal whether French expeditionary troops has been dispatched.

The French press meanwhile called for such action and also suggested that the Allies take possession of the Danish Faroe Islands, 275 miles north of Britain's Scapa Flow naval base, and there develop naval and air bases now that Denmark is occupied by Germany.

Nazi Invasion Dazes Oslo

all seemed dazed but there were no signs of fear or panic.

The air was filled with the roar of airplane engines as the Germans circled ceaselessly, hoping thereby to strike terror into the inhabitants. The streets were deserted and all offices and banks closed.

From a hotel window a German fighter was seen power diving over the harbor, its machine-guns spitting amid desultory antiaircraft fire. Toward late afternoon from the United States Legation some distance from the city, the roar of airplane engines was again heard and three bombers were seen circling at a great height. People watched unconcerned until there was a terrific roar and an explosion which blew up a house 200 yards away. As the wreckage disappeared in black smoke, five more bombs landed nearby in quick succession.

People in the legation were at first dumbfounded, failing to understand why the Germans should continue their raids after the city had fallen to them. Then it was realized a counter-action had begun, and, looking more carefully at the high-flying planes, it was remarked that they resembled British Blenheims rather than German bombers. Neither these nor another which later flew swiftly eastward met any opposition.

The city was now full of German troops which converged upon it in commandeered buses, cars and afoot from all directions.

It was not imperative for the British correspondent to leave since the Germans were already seizing communications. Oslo station was heavily guarded by German troops and the streets were thronged with Germans.

By mingling in the surging crowd it was possible for the correspondent to pass undetected and unquestioned. The frontier was reached about midnight, but the Germans had not yet taken control.

The uppermost feeling in the minds of the inhabitants of Oslo is one of astonishment and incomprehension. They cannot understand why this misfortune has befallen them and the question is on everyone's lips: "Why have the Western powers allowed such a state of affairs to come to pass?" and "what is the British navy doing? Surely this invasion could be stopped."

'Enoch Arden' Tragic? No! It's Bliss Itself

Old-Time Sad Situation Is Now Funny; Jimmie Rawls Returns to His Hometown; Latest Dispatches From the Theatrical Front

By Richard L. Coe
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

TEMPUS FIDGETS and the once terrible, tragic, tear-jerky Enoch Arden situation has fidgeted itself into a laughing matter.

It would take a Governor of Michigan to feel too morbid about the change of taste which once required tears for the plight of the poor widow who was enjoying her second husband until the first turned up from a salty grave. That was a ghastly impasse, soluble only by death. But today—and tomorrow in the Earle's "Too Many Husbands"—the very idea of a pretty, obviously well-fed lass with two husbands becomes a howlingly funny situation over which most women, rather than feel grim, would lick their lips.

Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas are the triangle. To be sure, the boys are bitter about the entire episode, but Miss Arthur just eats it up. When, early in the day an envying secretary tells her: "You married the only two men I've ever loved," the erstwhile secretary to the Senator Smith who came to Washington got an idea. This idea is never mentioned for fear of completely demolishing the Hays Office, but from the dreamy, gloating expression odd-voiced Jean carries throughout the problem, you can't miss the pleasant things she is anticipating. Yes sir, time was when two husbands were not nice to contemplate, but now-a-days the only people in the drammer who seem sincerely shocked are a couple of guys who obviously have just crawled out of the woodwork.

Hope on the Horizon Note: Rumored booking for the National the week of May 20 is Buddy De Sylvia's new musical, "Louisiana Purchase." This a rumor, nothing more as yet, for the just-in-the-rehearsal-stages play opens a two-week run in Philadelphia with a dark week between its closing there and Broadway bow on the 27th.

To the list of those who evolved from Amateur Life into more remunerative stages, add the name of Jimmie Rawls. Jimmie went to school and college here, worked at the Department of Labor. Like so many who keep a Federal Diary, Jimmie filled his evening pages by playing in many of our town's drama groups. He played with the Civic, too, and with Roadside in the summer. Now he's coming back for a single performance and getting paid for it.

Three years ago he decided to stake out for himself. Joining Charles Coburn's celebrated Mohawk Drama Festival, he has appeared opposite Cornelia Otis Skinner, Sally Eilers and Eugenie Leontovitch. Clare Tree Major saw him as the boy with Frank Craven in "Our Town" and offered him a full season of touring with her Children's Theater. And in Mrs. Major's production of "Alladin," her final offering of the season at the National on Saturday morning, Jimmie's friends will see him working at his avocation—and getting paid for it.

G with the W pops up again with the news that the Hyattsville Theater, Hyattsville; the Milo Theater, Rockville, and the Marlboro Theater in Upper Marlboro, will play the Civil War film on a basis similar to that employed for the F street and Virginia runs. The first two houses will play the film six days, the Marlboro for three, opening simultaneously Sunday the 28th.

Now Hollywood reaches out for its actor-folk into the Senate cloakrooms. Not, to be sure, for the weighty solons, but for the blue-suited page boys. Charles Rogers, of Columbia Pictures, has bought Lew Foster's original story, "Senate Page Boy" and William Pierce has been looking over some of the authentic page boys. Foster it was who wrote the script for "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which was attacked here, but won an "Oscar" for scripting in Hollywood.

Frighening Thought Department in the manner of L. Lyons: "Dr. Cyclops" has "extended his influence," so a release reads. "to Bowie race track." Don't be too alarmed though, for its only the title of tomorrow's feature handicap, which has been named "The Dr. Cyclops." The vacationing Sam Jack Kaufman, whose podium is being held by tootin' Harry James, will award the trophy.

An "All Star Cartoon Show" will be presented at the Tivoli Theater Saturday morning at 10:30, offering an hour-and-a-half of Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, Popeye and Porky Pig.

Amorous or Paternal, Walter?

DEANNA DURBIN AND WALTER PIDGEON
in "It's a Date," RKO-Keith's new film, opening at the Fifteenth street house tomorrow morning. Hollywood Parade

By Jimmy Fidler

Hollywood, April 10.—Remember the slang adage, "He who has, gits?" It has a parallel in the case with which a big studio, already overrun with top-flight stars, can "build" new favorites. Here, for example, is the technique employed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which has more "big names" than any of its competitors.

FIDLER

Along comes a gal like Laraine Day—possessed of beauty, talent, intelligence and that elusive quality we used to call S. A. before the Hays office got so darned persnikity. Once studio heads are convinced of her potentialities (Metro had to loan Laraine to another company to discover her worth), it's imperative to introduce her to a maximum number of theater-goers in a minimum period of time. Nothing's easier—if there's enough variety in the list of already-established stars.

Mickey Rooney has an enormous audience—a different audience than the equally numerous following of MacDonald and Eddy. Spencer Tracy and Robert Taylor both pack them in—but the "them," in each case, represents different audiences. Wally Beery and William Powell each has an individual audience.

By casting Laraine first with one top-flighter, then with another, she meets Mr. and Mrs. America in hurry-up order and emerges, at the end of a year or 18 months, with an established following of her own—the only catch in the whole equation being the law of supply and demand. Quite possibly by the time Laraine reaches the top, one of the stars used as a rung in her ladder to fame must be dropped to give her a place in the sun.

PERSONAL OBSERVATIONS: After eight years of stardom, Clark Gable's still unable to mention acting without half-ashamed depreciation . . . Odd how many people always confuse Wendy Barrie and Binnie Barnes, who look not at all alike . . . Don't let Charlie Laughton's flabby appearance fool you—he has a grip like a blacksmith . . . She's been gone for a year, but RKO workers invariably cite Katharine Hepburn's screwy doings when they want to top your best Hollywood anecdote . . .

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, April 10.

MRS. JACOB P. ADLER, mother of Luther and Stella Adler, is looking forward to the day when again she will see them appearing in the same play . . . Mrs. Adler, widow of the great Yiddish actor, treasures the memory of the premiere of "Paradise Lost," the Odets play in which both Stella and Luther appeared. She rushed backstage after the opening and congratulated her children for their excellent performances . . . "And what about the rest of the cast?" Mrs. Adler was asked by another actor . . . "Tonight," she beamed, bestowing the finest accolade she knew, "you were ALL Adlers."

AL SMITH telephoned Gen. Hugh Johnson, after the latter's anti-New Deal speech before the National Democratic Club dinner—and extended his congratulations . . . If and when Thomas E. Dewey is assured of a place on the Republican ticket, and resigns from his job as district attorney, Gov. Lehman will name as his successor Bernard Botein, the prosecutor who has become Lehman's trouble-shooter . . . Louis Kronenberger, Time magazine's drama-reviewer, will be the drama critic for "P. M." . . . Manuel Komroff, author of "Coronet," now is doing research work for a book about Horace Liveright, the late book publisher.

MICHAEL TODD, who will present four major productions at the World's Fair, is enthused particularly about his New Orleans show—for which the admission price will be 25 cents, with no extra gimicks . . . To publicise this show, Todd ordered large, silver-coated reproductions of a 25-cent piece. With the inscription "In Todd We Trust," and the announcement that this, like the fee to his New Orleans production, is the biggest quarter in the world . . . But these large quarters, he learned, cost $2.50 each.

JOE PANUCK, of the SEC in New York, now has influential backing for the job of SEC commissioner . . . Experienced pilots in New York are being offered $8,000 a trip, when the weather clears, to fly the newly purchased Lockheed bombers from Canada to England . . . Marc Blitzstein, who won a Guggenheim Fellowship this week, will devote his time now to writing the music and sound material for a documentary movie. The film will tell the story of what happens when machines replace men . . . Abe Lyman's orchestra will play at the Barbary Coast show at the fair . . . Milton Berle, who started at $175 a week in that theater, will net $7,500 a week for himself at Loew's State the week of April 25. There'll be a comedians' war on Broadway that week, with Rochester—Jack Benny's aide—at the Paramount, and Cantor and Jessel at the Capitol.

CANTOR AND JESSEL started their vaudeville teamwork as the result of a benefit performance. Jessel was in Eddie's room, and was called away to play a benefit. He promised to return, but Cantor wouldn't believe him . . . "Then why don't you come along?" George suggested. Eddie agreed—and they rehearsed a four-minute routine. It was so well received that they went to another benefit and lengthened the routine to eight minutes. That night they went looking for more benefit shows, until the routine was a 24-minute one. They ended at the Imperial Theater—where the benefit audience had left, and they did their show for the doorman . . . This was the start of their vaudeville partnership.

ERIC VON STROHEIM was offered the role of the Nazi Consul, in the West Coast production of Clare Boothe's "Margin for Error." His salary was to be $2,500 a week, but Von Stroheim wanted to read the script . . . He appeared at the producer's office the next morning, said: "All right, I'll do it—but here are the revisions I've made." He didn't get the job, because he had eliminated all the flip answers given to the Nazi Consul by Patrolman Moe Finkelstein—the cop played by Sam Levene in the Broadway production. "I've changed all that," Von Stroheim explained, "because no German Consul would take such talk from a non-Aryan cop."

Almost a Distinction

William Henry, appearing in Paramount's "The Way of All Flesh," is one of the few actors born in Hollywood. He made his film debut when he was 8, playing a small part in Victor Fleming's "Lord Jim."

Actor Adrian

Adrian Morris, brother of Chester Morris, has joined the cast of "Florian."

Little

Jean Renoir's stirring film, "The Human Beast," adapted from Emil Zola's powerful novel of inherited affliction, entered its second week at the Little Theater yesterday.

Jean Gabin is the leading player of the French importation, and with his artless performance further establishes the impression in "Grand Illusion" that here is a film artist of the first rank. With superb dispassion he portrays a figure that is passionately tragic. He is a railroad engineer whose love for another man's wife and whose inability to control his murderous instincts make him a figure of grim pity.

Simone Simon, as the selfish woman who married her middle-class husband to get a change in her pathetic situation gives a performance the like of which she has never previously hinted. Ledoux, as her unattractive husband, lends a realism to his sordid nature that is of vast importance to the film's credibility.

The roar of the railroad yards is ever on the sound track and the Renoir skill of building up an atmosphere contribute power and force to one of the finest of the year's importations.

'Rebecca' Tops List of Week's New Films

New Bills Open Tomorrow Downtown; Glen Echo Opens

"REBECCA." Daphne du Maurrier's phenomenally successful novel has been brought to the screen by the master director, Alfred Hitchcock, with Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine in the principal roles, will open at the Palace Theater tomorrow morning. The story tells of a man and the girl whom he married after the death of his first wife. Rebecca, the first wife, was a faithless wanton but her influence dominates the story and its characters. The psychological aspects of this story should be well-drawn by the man who directed "The 39 Steps" and "The Lady Vanishes." George Sanders, Judith Anderson, Nigel Bruce, Reginald Denny, C. Aubrey Smith, Gladys Cooper, Leo G. Carroll and Melville Cooper are the supporting players.

Earle

"TOO MANY HUSBANDS." Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas costar in this marital confusion adapted from the play by W. Somerset Maugham. The story concerns the young lady who marries her husband's best friend when the former is reported lost at sea. Of course he isn't and there's where the plot comes from. Others in the farce are Harry Davenport, Dorothy Peterson, Melville Cooper, Mary Treen and Tom Dugan. "New Faces," the stage revue, will introduce performers new to Washington. Mary Small, of radio; Joe Jackson jr., Walton and O'Rourke, puppeteers, and Geraldine and Joe are the newcomers.

RKO-Keith's

"IT'S A DATE." Deanna Durbin's seventh film finds that young lady being treated as such by her discoverer, Joe Pasternak. The young singing star plays the unexpectedly adult daughter of an actress, Kay Francis, as Miss Durbin's mother. Cecilia Loftus, Walter Pidgeon, Lewis Howard, Eugene Pallette, Samuel S. Hinds, Fritz Feld, Henry Stephenson and Harry Owens, with his Royal Hawaiians, are featured. Several of the scenes are laid in Hawaii. Also on the incoming bill is Walt Disney's latest, "The Riveter." Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"DR. CYCLOPS." The story of a mad scientist who turns human beings into one-fifth their normal size while retaining their usual emotions and personalities has been brought to the screen in Technicolor by Ernest Schoedsack, who made "King Kong" and "Chang." The players in this fantastic drama are Albert Dekker, Janice Logan, Thomas Coley, Charles Halton, Victor Kilian and Frank Yaconelli. On the stage, the Capitol will present Harry James and his orchestra bringing the swing music that has made them national network favorites. Beatrice Howell, the mimic; Jane Fraser and the Three Ponzal Boys are the other vaudeville acts. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"ROAD TO SINGAPORE." After a week's engagement at the Earle this musical comedy film returns with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour in the starring roles. The story concerns a couple of women-haters who go off to the South Seas to get away from it all—and do nothing of the kind. Judith Barrett, Anthony Quinn and Charles Coburn are in the cast. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"THE HOUSE ACROSS THE BAY." Joan Bennett, George Raft, Gladys George and Walter Pidgeon have the leading roles in this story of a young woman whose husband is sent to Alcatraz for tax evasion. Lloyd Nolan, Jaune Knight, Peggy Shannon and Edward Fielding are featured. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"THE STORY OF OUR FLAG." An all-encompassing history of the United States flag is the principal short subject at the newsreel theater for the incoming week. "Men of Muscle," filmed at Springfield College, depicts the school noted for its physical education training. "Unusual Occupations" and 35 minutes of news clips round out the bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

Belasco

"LOUISE." Grace Moore continues in this French picturization of the Melodie Charpentier opera about the Paris dressmaker and her family. Georges Thill and Andre Pernet of the Paris opera are in the cast.

Glen Echo

THE OUT-DOOR AMUSEMENT SEASON begins officially at high noon on Saturday when the doors open at Glen Echo Amusement Park. With two new cafes and a shiny new entrance, the park is set to catch the eye from the first stroke of noon. Fifty amusements and picnic groves are the traditional offerings of this familiar spot. In the Spanish ballroom, Paul Kain will lead his celebrated band for dancing every evening except Sunday. Glen Echo may be reached by driving out either Massachusetts avenue or Pennsylvania to Conduit road. Trolley cars are available. Parking is free.

Gayety

"MIRTH AND MELODY." Lois De-Fee headlines the incoming burlesque production opening Sunday afternoon. Others in this musical revue include Looney Lewis, Jean Carter, Dudley Douglas, Manie Kadiff and Arlene Stewart. Billy "Beef Trust" Watson continues through Saturday's midnight performance.

Howard

SNOOKUM RUSSELL and his orchestra, the Deep River Boys, Butterbeans and Susie are the headline names at the T street combination house for the next week. Drummer Bernard Brown is featured with the swing band. The Deep River Boys have a national radio following. On the screen, Wallace Beery will star in "The Man from Dakota." Reserved seats are available for the Saturday midnight performance. Opens tomorrow morning.

Open-Air

"LADY TUBBS," featuring Alice Brady and Anita Louise is the drive-in auto theater's new feature, opening a three-day engagement tonight. The story tells of a lumber-camp cook who inherited a fortune, acquires British "airs." Short subjects and feature film go on the open-air screen twice nightly.

Children's Theater

"ALADDIN'S LAMP." The final production of Clare Tree Major's local season will be presented on Saturday morning at the National Theater. "Aladdin and his Wonderful Lamp" is well known to all, and this children's performance will be played by a cast of professionals who are completing a nation-wide tour in the play.

Play Tournament

THE FINALS in the One-Act Play Tournament will be held on Saturday evening in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School. The drama section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase, the Federal Bureau of Investigation Theater Group, the Eckington-Roosevelt Players and the Troupers of East Washington Community Center are the finalists.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 10.

The other day when I caught Joan Blondell knitting a wee garment on the "I Want a Divorce" set, I was sure there'd be another addition to the Powell family. Just as I got all set to ask embarrassing questions, Joan's maid brought in her 6-month-old cocker spaniel, and the small sweater was fitted on it! . . . There's so much said about divorce here that I like to tell the other side. While watching the activity on the 'Young People" set, a boy came in with a telegram for Charlotte Greenwood—and Jack Oakie piped up, "What is this? You've had a wire every half-hour today—somebody ribbing you?"

HOPPER

Charlotte replied, "Well, it may sound silly, but on a day when I have a big job—either in the theater or in films—Martin Broones, my husband of 16 years, sends me a telegram every 30 minutes. They always contain good advice—'Don't forget your pay'—'Keep your voice down'—'Give all you've got'—and,' added Charlotte, "I'm not ashamed of the 'I love you's,' either."

Which reminds me that Martin Broones is planning to build a theater in Beverly Hills, which will be a godsend, for we have to drive 20 miles to see a good show.

I'd like to give H. B. Franklin a big pat on the back. For years he's been manager of the West Coast Theaters, released pictures that other have produced. He finally did one of his own—"The Villain Still Pursued Her." The people in the cast—and I've heard it from three actors—said they'd never been treated with such kindness, courtesy and consideration.

From the moment you stepped on the stage in the morning until you left at night, you had a mental uplift. When the picture was finished, he presented William Farnum, Franklin Pangborn and others with beautiful wallets, marked with their names, and filled with greenbacks, and presented the ladies with purses, filled likewise. Which happened on his birthday, but not one knew it.

For the first time in screen advertising, Paramount is going to use surrealist art on Bob Hope for "The Ghost Breakers." If you're lucky, you'll see a likeness. His nose will probably be a staircase and his cheek a kitchen chair! . . .

The Great Dane Jackie Cooper uses in "Henry Aldrich" is going to find himself as famous as Strongheart if he doesn't watch out. He's 3 years old, worked with Ronnie Colman in "If I Were King," "Each Dawn I Die," was Laurence Olivier's pet in "Wuthering Heights," marooned with the Swiss Family in "Robinson," and had a "Date With Destiny" and Basil Rathbone. Oh, how I wish I could interview a dog! . . .

Lelia Ernest, Jackie Cooper's sweetheart in the picture and off the screen, has been nicknamed "The Boston Bombshell," and has four debuts to her credit in one year—her first in Boston, then New York stage, pictures and in a courtroom to have her Paramount contract okayed.

How I wish you could have heard John Charles Thomas sing a new Negro spiritual titled "Amen." It was written by colored Joe Crawford, a member of the chorus in a church scene for "Maryland." And even before the picture has been previewed, the sale of the song has been tremendous.

Chicago packers have boasted for years that they utilize and can everything but a pig's squeal. Now Harry Sherman is going to take care of that. He'll send back a recording machine to can the squeal of 1,000 pigs at the Chicago stockyards for "Doomed Caravan" . . .

Harpo Marx, in speaking of a certain actor, said, "He's such a ham he must bathe in mustard."

Cancer Clinic Schedule Given By Seckinger

Examinations Are Part of District Control Campaign

Schedule for the cancer clinics in the city this month was announced yesterday by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer and coordinator of the local control campaign. National cancer control month is being observed.

"Through the courtesy and cooperation of the local hospitals and the Health Security Administration, special attention will be given to persons presenting themselves for examination in the remainder of the month, and, when indicated, arrangements will be made for treatment," he said.

The schedule is as follows:

Columbia Hospital, 3425 L street northwest—White women on Mondays from 1:30-3:30 p. m.; colored women, Wednesday from 1:30-3:30 p. m.

Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital, Eighth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast—Daily except Sundays, from 12-2 p. m.

Freedmens Hospital, Sixth and Bryant streets northwest—Appointments by phone, North 0754.

Gallinger Hospital, Nineteenth and C streets southeast Tuesdays and Fridays, from 1-3 p. m.

Garfield Hospital, Tenth street and Florida avenue northwest—Daily, except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, from 2 to 3:30 p. m.

Georgetown University Hospital, Thirty-fifth and N streets northwest—Wednesdays, registrations between 11:30 and 12:30 p. m.

Providence Hospital, Second and D streets southeast—Saturdays at 1 p. m.

Veterans Administration Facility (Mount Alto Hospital), 2600 Wisconsin avenue northwest—Daily, except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. For examination of former service men and women only, and persons needing attention will be referred to special cancer clinics.

Ross Garrett, head of the Health Security Administration, said yesterday that persons who might neglect this opportunity because of financial inadequacy could make appointments for cancer examinations at these various clinics in his office, 1823 L street northwest, or telephone Metropolitan 3900.

Large Smokies Group to Be At Folk Fete

About 50 Dancers And Ballad Singers To Attend Festival

The Smoky Mountain section of North Carolina will send one of the largest single groups of participants to the National Folk Festival, Bascom Lamar Lunsford, director of the Asheville Mountain Song and Dance Festival, said here yesterday.

About 50 square dancers and ballad singers will appear at Constitution Hall during the festival, which opens April 25 and continues for three days. All are true sons and daughters of the Smokies, descendants of the first English settlers to head West from the coast.

Square dancing is no "revival" movement in Lunsford's country. The mountaineers gather for a dance at the drop of a fiddle bow, and the forms they use have been handed down to them by their parents and grandparents. They resent the implication that the steps are "old-fashioned," and refuse to dress up in period costumes for their festival performances.

Lunsford is now in Washington to give demonstrations of square dancing as a preliminary to the festival. Yesterday he appeared before the Penwomen's Club, and he will give other performances at the Marjorie Webster School, the Calvary Methodist, the Madeira School and Hood College. Last week he took a group of his mountain dancers to Pittsburgh, where they staged a highly successful recital under the sponsorship of the In-and-About Pittsburgh Music Educators Club.

National Folk Festival tickets are now on sale at The Post. Prices for the three matinees range from 50 cents to $1.00; for the evening shows, from 50 cents to $1.50.

Jasper Auxiliary To Meet Tonight

The Sergeant Jasper Unit, No. 13, American Legion Auxiliary will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Grafton Hotel. An executive committee meeting has been called for 7:30 o'clock.

Among the Speakers will be Representative James E. Van Zandt, a member of the House Veterans Committee; Capt. Rhoda Millikin, head of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department; Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the District Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare, and Mrs. Frances O'Hearne, chairman of the unit's child welfare committee.

Pedestrian Toll Cut, Traffic Survey Shows

Drops 9 Per Cent Since Adoption Of Walking Rules

Pedestrian deaths in Washington have dropped 9.2 per cent since adoption of walking regulations in March, 1939, Traffic Director William Van Duzer announced yesterday.

An analysis of accident figures also showed a 9.66 per cent reduction in injuries to pedestrians, he said. During the 12-month period prior to March of last year, 2,041 pedestrians were injured and 65 killed.

During last year's operation of pedestrian regulations, the injury figure dropped to 1,844 and fatalities decreased to 59.

"And this favorable pedestrian showing," said Van Duzer, "was made while traffic accidents in general in the District increased 19.4 per cent."

Pedestrian injuries showed a steady decline during 9 of the past 12 months, Van Duzer reported, and during only three months was there a small increase. The first three months of this year brought a 15 per cent reduction in injuries to walkers as against the same period for 1939, he added.

Van Duzer also announced that Washington is approaching its recent record of 27 days without an automobile fatality. He said 23 days have now passed without an accident death.

Meanwhile, the American Automobile Association predicted more than 6,000 lives will be saved in the next three years as the result of widespread adoption of pedestrian regulations.

D'Artagnan Play

Performances of the play "George and Margaret," will be presented tonight and at 8:30 tomorrow night by the D'Artagnan Club at Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest. Proceeds are to go to the District Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

Exorbitant Interest

It is not surprising to learn that a professional organization has tabled a report supporting the bill to permit small-loan companies in the District to charge interest rates as high as 2½ per cent a month. That is the usual reaction of uninformed groups to small-loan legislation. The astonishing fact is that the organization in question is the District Bar Association.

Most persons are accustomed to thinking of interest rates in terms of 3 to 8 per cent. They naturally regard a measure permitting interest as high as 30 per cent on a yearly basis as being outrageous. That is why the present inoperative small-loans law in the District has never been modernized. Legal interest of 30 per cent becomes reasonable only as an alternative to the 240 per cent interest illegally charged in many cases where legitimate companies are not permitted to operate.

Intelligent consideration of this problem must start with the fact that citizens of small means occasionally have to borrow money without security. If they cannot obtain it from legitimate lending agencies, they fall into the clutches of loan sharks. So it is not a question of sanctioning usury by law, but a question of supplanting an illegal racket by a regulated business.

Experience has shown that character loans of this type cannot be made for less than about 2½ per cent a month without loss to the lenders. Both Virginia and Maryland authorize loans bearing 3½ per cent monthly interest. Those who close their eyes to the fact that a relatively high interest rate is essential to attract capital into this field simply consign low-income borrowers into the hands of ruthless exploiters.

It is impossible to believe that the Bar Association will give aid and comfort to this racket by refusing to sponsor the small-loans bill. When the shocking alternative to small loans at 2½ per cent a month is fully understood the excellent work of Arthur J. Hilland's committee will probably be given full support.

Mrs. Pat Campbell

Quite aside from her great gifts as an emotional actress, Mrs. Patrick Campbell was one of the most remarkable women of her generation, She was, for instance, the first and perhaps the only person to discover that the secret of George Bernard Shaw's genius lay in a certain "maiden modesty." To her Shaw was merely "Joey," and she seems to have treated him with the indulgent affection that one gives to a child.

All the same it was Shaw who, by various wiles, persuaded her to put aside a Victorian squeamishness about her part in Pygmalion. For his sake, and against all the advice of her professional friends, she consented to send shivers of delicious horror through her audiences by boldly uttering the unutterable word, "bl--dy." Nevertheless—and probably to Shaw's consternation—she made of his Eliza Doolittle a character so tender and human that many wept where they were meant to laugh. It was (after Paula in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," her first big success) perhaps the greatest of her roles.

As an actress, Mrs. Campbell belonged pretty much in the tradition of Rachael. As a personality she belonged to that strange Indian Summer of the romantic movement when it was necessary above all things to be emotional in art and when "temperament," or as we should say nowadays, "infantilism," was a professional asset.

The roster of her worshipers included almost all the great names of the golden nineties, Wilde, Beardsley, Yeats, Burne-Jones, Frank Harris, Edmund Gosse and Arthur Symons, who called her "the only actress on the English stage worth listening to." As a middle-aged woman, she played Melisande to the Pelleas of the great Sarah Bernhardt, and all who saw that production declare it was something indeed to behold.

There were real as well as stage tragedies in her life, the death of her husband, Capt. Campbell, while fighting the Boers, and the death of her son, while fighting the Germans. Since she was an artist, above all, there is no doubt that her acting was refined by these losses. She lived to see a day when the tragedies of individuals, on the stage or in life, seem almost to lose their meaning against the tragedies which are overwhelming whole nations.

Over The North Sea

Although there is as yet no serious outbreak of hostilities along the fortified lines in France, the war has blazed into activity as a result of the German invasion of Norway.

Up and down the long and rugged coastline of that seafaring nation a whole series of bitter naval engagements is being fought. As auxiliaries to their capital ships the British and Germans alike are employing submarines and air squadrons, attacking the enemy with these subordinate arms wherever and whenever opportunity affords. Both the isolated and the comprehensive nature of these scattered attacks make it the more difficult to obtain a clear picture of the way in which the tide of battle flows.

It is clear, however, that this British resistance to German domination of the Norwegian coast is being conducted with a determination and aggressiveness heretofore lacking in Allied military operations. The reason is clear. If Germany can obtain uncontested control of this coast, particularly the western section between and including the ports of Bergen and Stavanger, the Nazi striking power against Great Britain will be enormously increased.

From Bergen to Scapa Flow, for instance, is only 300 miles, which is 200 miles nearer Britain's principal northern naval base than is the closest German airport. From Bergen to the Shetland Islands is only a trifle over 200 miles. In other words, the power of the British navy to command the narrow waters, and enforce the blockade, between Scotland and Norway would be definitely threatened by squadrons of air raiders operating from the nearby Norwegian coast.

The great industrial and munition-making areas of northern England are also much more endangered by the German occupation of Norway. From Newcastle to Stavanger is less than 400 miles by air and from Stavanger to Glasgow only a few miles more. By the Scandinavian coup, in other words, Germany clearly hopes to increase its striking power against Great Britain, and perhaps particularly against British command of the sea.

It is against this threat that the British are reacting. The vigorous effort to destroy all the German warships which have covered the seizure of Norway's ports is in reality a defensive move, designed to make the conversion of those ports into air bases more difficult. And of similar character is yesterday's statement by Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary, to the effect that Great Britain will fight for Norway even if the government of that country is forced to make terms with the invader.

British seapower is such that the German warships in Norwegian waters seem likely to be destroyed, or driven permanently to harbor. That would make the service of supply for the German army of occupation much more difficult. On the other hand German air strength will now perhaps be unleashed in full force against the British North Sea fleet, bringing an answer to the unsolved question of the vulnerability of capital ships to concentrated air attack.

A new and intensely active phase of the war has opened. It is also a form of warfare which, like most of the hostilities to date, is without exact precedent in the experience of 1914-18. It is, furthermore, fighting of a character in which Germany, for so long as she maintains superiority in the air, will continue to have the advantage of forcing the Allies to wage war defensively. The importance of air power is again emphasized by this week's terrible and sensational events.

Rebuke For Mr. Dies

Judge Letts of the District Court delivered a well-deserved rebuke to the Dies Committee in his decision to void the warrants issued last week for the arrest of two Communists who had refused to answer certain questions asked by the committee. And Chairman Dies added nothing to his stature by his original reaction to this judicial move.

The right of the committee to ask questions and require answers from its witnesses was not involved in Judge Letts' decision. Nor was the unquestioned authority of the House to cite for contempt recalcitrant witnesses before Congressional committees. But he did take issue with the Dies Committee in pursuing a procedure not authorized by the law and, indeed, in obvious circumvention of the law. In other words, the ends which the committee sought to achieve by placing the two men under arrest before they had been indicted by a grand jury could not justify the means employed.

Judge Letts went further and pointed out that the rather elaborate procedure laid down in the law in such cases was "intended to protect its citizens in their political rights" and was designed "to set up as a safeguard against unfair treatment or unfair attack a method mandatory in its nature which required the action of the grand jury before one so accused could be placed on trial."

This procedure the committee had originally failed to follow. Yet there is no greater obligation which rests on Congress, Congressional committees and public authorities generally in these days of rising passions than to pursue the straight and narrow path of rigid legality. The Bill of Rights is too great a heritage to be circumvented for whatever reasons and however worthwhile a cause.

Chairman Dies himself temporarily manifested disturbing symptoms of the infection his committee has been seeking to combat when, in his comment on the action of Judge Letts, he declared: "If there ain't a law, we'll give them some law." His reasoning in this instance was as bad as his grammar. It raised the disturbing implication that perhaps the Congressman has begun to consider himself above the law.

Fortunately, Mr. Dies' second thought was much better than his first. In asking the District grand jury to indict the two Communists released by Judge Letts he followed the correct and proper procedure. He should have taken this course in the first place.

Fallacious Assumption

In spite of his silence as to a third-term nomination, President Roosevelt is making an impressive showing in the Democratic primaries. His 6-to-1 lead over Vice President Garner in Illinois, following a lesser victory in Wisconsin, will probably induce many Democratic leaders to climb aboard the third-term bandwagon.

The President must realize by now that, unles he takes a positive stand, it will soon be very difficult, if not impossible, to arrest the forward sweep of the third-term movement. Politicians in many States have been forced to conclude that the President will once more be a candidate. They are laying their plans on that asumption. So the President will soon be under terrific pressure to head the 1940 Democratic ticket whether or not that is his wish. If his decision is postponed much longer, it may be too late to withdraw.

There is a good deal of sympathy with Mr. Roosevelt's reluctance to say that he will not be in the White House next year. Many friends of the President believe that he is eager to retire. But he is represented as fearing that his influence in dealing with the critical international situation might be weakened by a definite commitment at this time. That is why the German invasion of Denmark and Norway seems to have enhanced the probability that a third-term race will be thrust upon him.

If these reports can be accepted, the President is postponing his vital decision on the assumption that his continued presence in the White House will be essential, or at least desirable, in the event of an international crisis. That assumption is strangely unrealistic. Anyone acquainted with American tradition knows that a third-term President would work under a serious handicap. As Ernest Lindley has pointed out, "his every act and word would be searched for the slightest hint of an effort to establish a 'dictatorship.'"

Those who visualize Mr. Roosevelt as a great world figure who could wield a powerful influence to safeguard American interests and promote world peace are thinking back to his triumph of 1936. No such victory can be reasonably anticipated in 1940 if the President again accepts the nomination. A strengthening of the opposition party is to be expected. And if the President should be reelected, many of his own followers would undoubtedly be on guard against giving him any power that could lead to a fourth term or indefinite tenure in the White House.

Far from assuring the country of strong and wise leadership in a critical period, a third term might easily cripple the United States in facing the repercussions of chaos in Europe and Asia. Mr. Roosevelt would undoubtedly be far more influential in the role of an elder statesman after next January than as Chief Executive. If the gloomy outlook that would confront any third-term President is realistically analyzed, Mr. Roosevelt is not likely to let the tide carry him much closer to another Chicago nomination without announcing his intention to retire.

Science Versus Belief

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

Science has been saying for a good long time now that bulls are absolutely color blind and can't tell a red flag from any other kind. It is the fact that the rag moves that agitates the bull, whether the color be yellow, red, blue, pink, cerise, mauve, pomegranate, puce or what have you. For all that, however, probably 99 out of every 100 persons will insist that red infuriates a bull. Maybe it got started because red is the color ordinarily associated with violent anger.

In this particular case the triumph of popular belief over the scientific fact doesn't make a great deal of difference, for anything that inspires the general public to have a healthy respect for a bull is helpful. In many other instances, however, the tendency of man to cling to beliefs that have been handed down with as little basis in fact does cause a great deal of harm. The idea that dull and insidious poisons float in the night air makes for a lot of highly inferior ventilation, and so it goes.

Stalemated War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Most judicially minded students of the European war are inclined to believe at present that it will result in a stalemate, which may be the best for the world as a whole. Since Britain declared this war, the burden is on her to push it to a conclusion, whereas all Germany much do is to "sit tight" until the foreign credits of Britain and France become depleted.

When the latter will be forced to make a fair peace, which they are not yet ready to do. The latest news from London indicates British desperation at this prospect, for nothing so tears the commercialized souls of the shopkeeping Britains as the loss of their dollars.

The appointment of Churchill is, from the German standpoint, the best thing that could have been done to stir their fighting spirit, for Churchill is piratical by nature, as his desire to prey on neutral nations proves. The Germans, therefore, will yearn to reach his neck personally.

Chamberlain, with a rather kindly disposition, is not the type to arouse the enemy's utmost determination. If Britain violates the rights of neutrals, she will forever be foreclosed from criticizing the Germans for going through Belgium in the World War.

As everyone knows, or should know, this war by Britain is for the retention of imperialistic power only. Her sole aim is to prevent German unification, which would mean a strong commercial rival. How foolish it would be for the United States to become embroiled in this war and jeopardize her democracy by causing an increase of $50,000,000,000 to $80,000,000,000 in the Federal debt, the taxing of everyone so heavily as to cause social unrest and perhaps revolt, the placing of a heavy burden on business in the prosecution of world commerce, and possibly a dictatorship here!

The Primaries Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are many reasons why Washingtonians, both Republican and Democratic, should attend the hearing which Senator Austin is calling Saturday at 10 a. m. on the District Presidential primary bill. One is the cost to national committeemen and women and delegates under present conditions.

For a Democrat to be considered for any of these honors he or she has to pay $200, which means that people who are hard up can't serve. The cost under the primary bill will be defrayed by a $1 poll tax charged each voter.

Both the Republicans and the Democrats have thrust on them people whom the mass of the members of each party do not want. The Republicans in 1936 had two sets of delegates chosen. Both went to the convention, and the one which was the least popular, won out there. That could not happen if the primary bill were in effect.

The Democrats have had the same national committeewoman for over 20 years. An effort was made to oust her in 1936, but the President passed around word that he wanted her to serve again, just as the President tried to tell Marylanders whom they ought to have for Senator that same year.

Mrs. Harriman was never in Washington at campaign time, even before she went to Norway as minister. Now she can't be reached at all when needed for political purposes. Also it is generally believed that she comes under the Hatch Act and cannot serve.

Only the quick passage of this primary bill will correct these evils which both parties suffer in Washington.

"District Reorganization"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Kindly grant me space in your columns to join with, and express my hearty approval of the letter of April 4 under the heading "District Reorganization" signed by Dr. Edward R. Gookin, relative to the transfer and location of the District of Columbia Fire Department.

He like myself, is opposed and protests the report of the survey committee along the lines mentioned. I might also state that I think of the four District of Columbia employes of the survey committee, Commissioner Hazen is the only one competent to qualify, and fitted to advocate the needs, wants, also the welfare and interests of the District of Columbia.

The other members of the survey committee are all fine gentlemen, still I claim, their short acquaintance, residence, and service rendered in the District of Columbia, unfits them for such exacting duties relative to the many matters affecting the interests and welfare of all sorts.

The Police and Fire Departments are among the most important branches of the District service. Hence my insistence that they should be the best in every way.

I trust Congress will make a thorough checkup, learn all facts and data available, study same from all sources and angles, and enact legislation that will prove best for the interests and welfare of the citizens and property owners.

Why make changes that will most likely prove detrimental? In my opinion it is folly and will prove unpopular and unwise for Congress to adhere to the recommendations of the survey committee as submitted.

"Our Town In Pictures"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please accept my thanks and commendation for the superb feature just closed in The Post. I refer to the three eight-page Sunday supplements setting forth the work of Washington churches. This feature must be ranked with one of the finest exclusive pieces of newspaper activity in a decade.

I am a former newspaper man, now in the ministry, but I am not writing as a partisan. Your feature was done with finesse and with a sense of justice and balance, in the light of the innumerable possibilities to offend, to neglect or even to caricature. The photographic reproductions of some of Washington's most ornate and architecturally beautiful churches were arresting and inspiring. I did not realize that there was so much beauty represented in the Washington edifices.

But better still, perhaps, was your portrayal of the activities of the churches. Many people claim that Christianity is "other-worldly," nonsocial and what not. Your series of the churches at work must give the lie to this idea, at least as far as the churches in the Nation's Capital are concerned.

Your commentator's insight into what religion is all about and as to the trends of the more up-to-date ministers and official bodies in the churches, was also good. I do not see how your feature could have been better done. All honor to those who undertook and carried forward this interesting gesture.

It must lift religion and the churches, in importance and significance, in the minds of your readers and the general public, especially of ungenerous critics of the church.

In closing may I suggest that the monuments, statues and memorials throughout the District might serve as a basis for one or more supplements in the future.

Criticizes Army Day Parade

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Army Day parade on Saturday convinced me that Orson Welles, Billy Rose or Earl Carroll (or all of them) should be drafted to teach the Army how to give the taxpayers a show for their money. I am no expert on parade techniques, but I have seen enough parades in foreign countries to know that our Army's style needs considerable smartening-up.

The most serious error was in stringing out similar parade units in thin, straggling lines. The Army seems to be oblivious to the technique of massing units which has been found so efficient and impressive in Europe. If the units had been properly massed and the various sections kept closer together, the procession would have been three times as impressive and it would have required only about a third of the time to pass the reviewing stand.

In addition to this fundamental error in formation and timing, the following matters deserve criticism: (1) The sloppy marching of the Infantry. (Some of the R. O. T. C. units were better.) (2) The failure to have sufficiently large massings of regimental and other colors in the parade, around the reviewing stand, and along the parade route. (3) The failure to line the route with uniformed men on each curb. (4) The comical differences in height of men marching in the same lines. (5) The undecipherable (to the spectators) insignia and flags of the various units.

A final example of bungling which I observed toward the end of the parade took place at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue. During a five-minute interval between two divorced sections two enormous and unsightly District sanitary trucks came roaring up to "clear the affected area" of something practically no one had noticed. Ten rowdy and confused colored street sweepers dismounted to accomplish what one man on foot could have done in two minutes or less. The audience appreciated the comic relief thus furnished, but it scarcely added to the impressiveness of the parade.

Paradoxically enough, by far the most impressive unit was the cavalry. Its very smartness, however, was a sad reminder that it is the most obsolete unit on review. But as long as the other branches of the Army continue to provide such poor shows, perhaps it would be money well spent to maintain the men on horseback if only for parade and horse-show purposes.

To sum up what may appear to be a carping letter: I am by no means a militarist, but I say that if we are going to have parades, let's have good ones. Constitution avenue is an ideal route, and we have a right to expect a better show for all the money we spend on the Army.

I shudder to think of the impression Saturday's parade must have made on the foreign military observers. They may reason that if we cannot stage an efficient modern parade we must not be as good in the field of modern war as we are supposed to be.

Greenwich Village Days

In the 1920's every down-at-the-heel-phony and pseudo-intellectual made a bee line for New York City's Greenwich Village, popularly but erroneously believed to be the hangout for any guy with brains but actually a paradise for loafers, bums and the intellectually adolescent. It was, in fact, a spot for mental exhibitionists who came to New York after a long period of frustration in the hinterland. It was a fantastic aggregation of human beings, male and female, who mysteriously contrived to pay for rent and food without any visible means of support.

Those were the days of long hair, which every one associated with "writers" and "painters," and of soiled shirts indicating heroic poverty which, for some strange reason, the uninitiated believe is the basis of genius. The truth is most of the money possessed by the esoteric band of crackpots had gone for exceedingly bad gin, which, while injurious to the gastronomic regions, brought on a flow of conversation which amazed not only the audience but the speaker himself.

Anyone could talk on any subject, no matter how abstruse or complicated. In fact, the more difficult the subject the longer the bull sessions lasted. It was all very beautiful and edifying indeed, for no one had the slightest idea of what they were talking about. Usually, the rapt attention of the audience was the sign of alcoholic stupefaction and not mental appreciation of the speaker's sparkling explanations of Life, Sin and Virtue.

We had a horror of reality which probably explains why none of us worked in the lush days of the '20's when any boob capable of walking, talking and dressing himself could make fifty bucks a week. We all thought it was contrary to the best interests of "art" to seek gainful employment, although it was not considered degrading to sell stuff to the magazines and newspapers, an event, I might add, which occurred with singular rarity.

The writing was pretty awful stuff, being strictly amateurish effusions and positively unsalable. I myself caused a near panic in our circles with the announcement that I had sold a Sunday magazine piece for the vast sum of $30.

Despite hundreds of rejection slips, however, reams and reams of nonsense poured from our pens and our typewriters. Rejection slips, in fact, were invariable occasion for long-winded diatribes against "stupid" editors who failed to appreciate "art" when they saw it. Unabashed, we continued to "write."

Everyone was a "genius," a word more often and more indiscriminately employed than any other in our limited vocabulary. If, perchance, one of the super-intellectuals concocted an unusually flippant epigram he was immediately put down as the living counterpart to Oscar Wilde. The truth is the fellow frequently was a dunce and had probably stolen his wisecrack from Shakespeare.

With all our self-intoxicating intellection and "brilliant" discourses on sex and morals, it is my mature opinion we were a pretty dull and stupid lot and incredibly ignorant of the world about us. Labor problems, finance, trade, politics and bathtubs to which many of us had a congenital aversion, were completely foreign to us. So were barber shops and manicurists.

The contrast between the village of 10 and 15 years ago and today is refreshing and almost incredible. One wonders how such a metamorphosis could have taken place with such speed. Gone are the dirty necks and soiled shirts and the "art" set.

There is, to be sure, a remnant of fakers but no more than the usual amount found in a given four-mile section of this great republic. The point is the village has made remarkable strides in the past few years, intellectually, spiritually and physically.

The inhabitants, at least the young ones, are out looking for honest work which is quite a departure from the parasitical existence of a decade or two ago. Their talk is sincere, honest and has substance. There is an obvious cessation of nonsense and kid stuff.

There seems to be an almost universal indifference to the topics of anatomical interest, subjects usually confined to the prattle of 14-year-old boys and girls but which were, for us, the apogee of mental gymnastics.

There seems to be an honest attempt to grasp the fundamentals of our National problems, such as relief, taxation, unemployment, labor unions and housing. Many of the youngest village denizens are attending evening classes in the neighborhood or uptown New York, a pursuit we scoffed at.

In short, an unbelievable seriousness, almost shocking upon a return visit, now pervades the once "wicked" village. The village, finally, has grown up, and while it may lack the superficial luster of a few years ago, it is my guess the boys and girls are far better off than our generation. At least, they realize life is more than fluffy "art." That is more than we knew, much to our regret in later years.

What Is Propaganda?

IT IS THIS country's right to decide whether the German nation of Adolf Hitler is an enemy to be fought openly or by measures short of war, but it is indecent to say that Hitler and the Allies are six of one and half a dozen of the other. During the last few months the Allies have been accused of making propaganda in the United States, and even the most obvious truths have been discredited or discounted as propaganda, because the truth shows how hateful and hostile to Americanism and American interests are the very spirit and all the actions of the German nation. It is recalled in this connection that in the last war the United States was flooded with propaganda, as though that propaganda was all of British make and false, when the known facts are that the Germans had their own propaganda mills here, and their agents were caught plotting to blow up American works.

The stories of the horrible atrocities in Belgium are scoffed away as though they had been disproved, when contemporary reports show that the Kaiser's soldiers wantonly slaughtered civilians in Belgian villages, and in one instance picked men at random from the midst of their families as they emerged from church on a Sunday morning and shot them against the wall of the cemetery as a warning to others not to offer a decent resistance to a foul and arrogant invader of a peaceful nation.

THE FAVORITE device by which the German atrocities are discredited is to sneer at stories of Belgian babies spitted on German bayonets or Belgian children whose hands were amputated by the gentle family men of the Kaiser's forces. These particular atrocities never were proved because they never were seriously offered, but the lack of that proof does not wipe out the known record of savagery by which the Germans hoped to make war so horrible that their enemies would quit.

In this war there are no charges of atrocities against the Allies, and yet the very truth about the Germans, which is prescribed in Hitler's own writings and substantiated by daily developments, is attacked as Allied propaganda.

It is Allied propaganda merely to mention that the Germans fell on a helpless democracy with the iron weight of a great machine and reduced a fine, free people to a sub-human status of robots in Prague, the home city of Karel Capek, the author of R. U. R. It is Allied propaganda to recall that Adolf Hitler, the man who contains that which is cynically called the soul of the German nation, had pledged the German's honor only a short time before that he would seek no more territory in Europe.

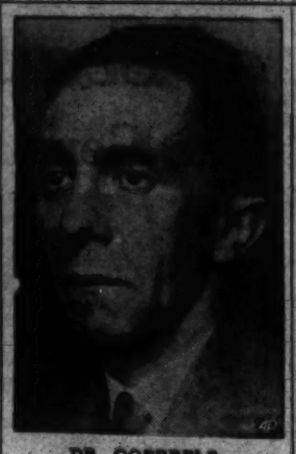
It is propaganda for the Allies to recall that Hitler expressed complete satisfaction with the relations between Germany and Poland, but soon discovered that the treacherous anti-Polish Germans in Poland, roughly corresponding to the members of the anti-American bund in this country, had been suffering terrible horrors for years and swept in to rescue them without declaring war.

THAT THE NAZIS then massacred whole companies of young Polish civilians very similar to American boys of the same age, dropping them still kicking into pits, because they presumed to defend their mothers and sisters with such poor weapons as they could find, is Allied propaganda, too. It is a historic fact that the Germans have not yet declared war on Poland and that, by the rules of war, those Polish boys, civilians though they were, had a right and duty to fight, but that is anti-German propaganda, too, and an attempt to draw the United States into war.

The dirty alliance between nazism and bolshevism is a piece of the same plot against the neutrality of the United States, and now the capture of Denmark and the invasion of Norway are propaganda for the Allies. So the sum of the record is that truth is the greatest propagandist for the allied side and the only propaganda that the Germans need fear.

The Versailles treaty was a mash-note by comparison with the terms of conquest which the Germans intended to impose on their enemies in the last war, and their present program, as plainly shown by their conduct to date, calls for the reduction of all defeated peoples to the status of soulless, sub-human servants of Hitler's chosen people.

Adolf Hitler's own book and the German record and their national racial obsession of superiority over the rest of mankind are propaganda which makes neutrality not merely difficult for Americans but shameful as well.



DR. GOEBBELS.
Even his model propaganda factory has not yet manufactured any atrocity charges for the export trade against the Allies in this war. See Westbrook Pegler's article in the adjoining column.

Circus Hits The Trail

(Written as the big show prepared to quit winter quarters and start North.)

Silver trains are lying in the Sarasota sun,
Loaded down with wonders that are measured by the ton;
Pointed for Manhattan and the opening date up North,
Waiting for the "highball" that will start them rolling forth.
Marvels by the parrel, innovations by the score;
Alfred Court's wild animals to build it up some more.
Feast your eyes upon her; she's a beauty and she's ready—
We know she's exacting, but she's every troupers "steady."

Hear the tigers snarling and the lion's mighty roar.
That's his way of saying that his holiday's a bore;
Tired of winter quarters, Leo's yearning for the trail—
Wants to hear the wheels start clicking on the Coast Line rail.
Elephants are swaying in their funny, restless way,
Trumpeting and squealing just as if they mean to say:
Big Town's all excited and the crew has billed it right,
Peanut heaven starts for elephants by day and night!

Buzz saws now are silent, for the new equipment's built,
Props are all aparkle in their silver, red and gilt;
Miles of rope and canvas; big top spars of giant fir—
Seats and ring curbs, Diesel engines; hear their throaty purr.
Blacksmith's tent and doctor's, cookhouse, floodlamps, titan "spots"
Standing by to light the workmen on a hundred lots.
Put it up and take it down and put it up and then
Take it down and put in up and load it out again.

High adventure waiting in the towns that lie ahead;
Struggle in the rain and muck until you're almost dead.
Soggy canvas, wagons in the mire up to the hubs,
Mahouts shouting, "Move it, Modoc! Ruth and Bess, you duds!
Don't you know we're late and got a hundred miles to run?
Got to get it loaded and be in before the sun!"
Let it rain and let it pour and let it freeze and blow,
Keep the "old rag" in the air and give the folks a show!

Set your type in spangles, all you journalists, and say—
Circus lemonade will wash a lot of blood away.

Let 'er go, let 'er go; she's been ready for a week,
We'll roar through Dixie like a silver streak;
We'll ferry it from Jersey by pale starlight,
And show 'em what Colossal means the first big night!

I wish nobody ill;
And will I stand this shoving
Around? I guess I will.

Must I endure this pushing?
Say, kid, you have me there!

The Wandering Lake

SVEN HEDIN is one of the world's truly great adventurers; and the tale he tells in "The Wandering Lake" (Dutton, $3.75) is of his greatest adventure. At Lop Nor, in the desert heart of Asia, the Swedish explorer's most fantastic dream came true; a great river which, for 1,600 years, had taken one course, turned northward, as Sven Hedin, 30 years earlier, had dared to prophesy. And as he was the first white man to hear rumors of that mighty change, so he was the first to float down the new-old river's channel to "the wandering lake," Lop Nor.

It takes a long time for news to leak out of Central Asia. The river actually began to change its course in 1921. In 1928 Hedin, questioning one of those desert men who follow the tinkling camel bells across sand and gravel, learned that on his route to Urumchi this man had for seven years been compelled to ferry across a river which had not previously been there. Hedin was, apparently, the first man to hear the news and one of the few who could understand what it meant. A rare coincidence!

It was in behalf of the Chinese government that Hedin made the last great expedition, in 1933-35. The Japanese war had not yet begun, but the Nationalist government was already interested in reviving the ancient caravan routes across central Asia. They talked of railroads, but history has acted in terms of automobiles. Hedin still believed that he was investigating possible railroad routes—if a practicable route through Lop-lan could be cleared, it would be some 300 miles shorter than the more northerly course now followed by the jolting trucks which bring supplies from Russia. But he explored with automobiles—and in dugout canoes.

THE CANOE ROUTE down the river obviously gave him greatest satisfaction. He sent the trucks off to hunt a route through the mountains to the north; he himself, with a group of Moslem assistants, set out with a fleet of 14 poplar dugouts, lashed together in twos and threes, actually floating on a broad expanse of water—sometimes 35 feet deep—where 34 years earlier he had thirstily plodded behind camels.

They found graves and mummies in that desert country, some with features astonishingly well preserved. One he calls an unknown princess, 5 feet 2 inches tall, who may have seen the garrison of Lou-lan march out to battle against the Huns 2,000 years ago and watched the great caravans carrying silk to China. Not far from that route some of Hedin's companions found a city of the dead—more than a hundred graves and as many upright wooden shafts, some carved like totem poles, mute reminders of a forgotten and mysterious civilization.

So Hedin left his lake and, after a roundabout journey, tried to reach it again from the east. Better automobiles, he thinks, might make it. With irrigation it would be possible to grow wheat in that forsaken land; already the shepherds are beginning to drift down the river with their flocks. Lou-lan may once again be a center of civilization.

Wars make headlines; rivers make history—that is Hedin's moral.

War And Scruples

A Lesson For Americans

THE IMPACT of the event upon Washington could not avoid being dramatic. It just happened that Secretary of State Hull was out of town, and necessarily had to hurry back. While Mr. Hull is the most undramatic of men, the most poised, the very last to commit any kind of stagey posturing, and the last to use drama as a technique for influencing the public, nevertheless the mere fact of his being away and hurrying back had a stirring quality. It happened also that President Roosevelt was at Hyde Park, meaning to stay several days. He, too, hurried back, and this had an effect of drama.

The fact is there is no need for America to react to this event as if it were an emergency, or as if it demanded any kind of drastic step on our part. This war in Europe has been seven and one-half months under way, it began September 1. On that day, anyone looking forward would have supposed, would have confidently predicted, that by this time great battles would have been fought, immense numbers of men killed. By the corresponding stage of the Great War, many hundreds of thousands had been slain.

What happened this week, compared to the magnitude of the war, is not a major incident—certainly not in its bearing on America's course. It provides no reason why America should get excited or take any dramatic step. The facts about our relation to the war, and the principles involved, remain the same as from the beginning. They are something we must take account of. Not all our people realize this, as they will be obliged to some time. But the German invasion of Denmark and Norway creates no immediate urgency for action by us, except routine extension of regulations under our neutrality law.

FROM THE POINT of view of the Allies, it is quite different. To them, the incident is somber, menacing. The most deep-reaching comment on it can be put in a single sentence: Hitler wanted to do it, and he did it. In that sentence is compressed all that can be said by military experts about the strategic aspect of it. The mere fact tells its own story. That Hitler wanted to do it is proof that it is to his advantage. That the Allies did not prevent it is proof that they are not, at this stage, winning the war.

There is a lesson in it, but it is not a new lesson. It has been repeated, through several years, until every thoughtful person must know it. Yet, tragically, while the thoughtful must know the lesson, they are, just because of their thoughtfulness, reluctant to act upon it.

Hitler wanted to advance to the Rhine, and the Allies did not prevent him. Hitler wanted to take Austria, and the Allies did not prevent him. Hitler wanted to take Czecho-Slovakia, and the Allies did not prevent him. Hitler wanted his way with Poland, and it was too late for the Allies to prevent him. Stalin wanted part of Finland, and the Allies did not prevent him.

In all these steps it is said that the defect of the Allies was delay, unwillingness or unreadiness to act in time. But we can put it another way. The defect of the Allies was something less to their discredit. Time after time the Allies were reluctant to precipitate war—while Hitler had no such reluctance. What the Allies lacked, compared to Hitler, was ruthlessness. What is going on in the world is a war between two levels of civilization. Wherever the two come into conflict, if the other conditions are more or less equal, the contest is won by the side most willing to be ruthless. It happened again this week. The Allies would not take possession of Norway against Norway's will. Hitler would.

TRUE, BELATEDLY, the Allies were willing to make a faint step in ruthlessness. They laid mines in the coastal waters of Norway. Now, ironically, that is given by the Germans as justification for their much longer step in ruthlessness, their seizure of Norway. The truth is, there was no relation between the two acts. The seizure of Norway had been planned by Germany for weeks, and was actually under way, before Britain mined Norway's waters.

The whole story about Scandinavia begins farther back, and illustrates the lesson that, so far, ruthlessness wins. After Finland was attacked by Stalin, the Allies were willing to help Finland. But Chamberlain would not send troops into Finland unless and until Finland made a formal, public request—Chamberlain was a gentleman. Also, Chamberlain would not send troops across Norway or Sweden unless those countries gave consent, and they would not. To contrast Chamberlain's restraint with Hitler's ruthlessness is hardly necessary.

Another lesson is illustrated by Norway and Sweden, especially Sweden. Upon them, primarily, lay the obligation to help Finland—both for Finland's sake and their own. But they thought that by not going to war for Finland, they could save themselves. They thought that by not offending Russia or Germany they could come through the war secure. They know better now. They know that what Hitler wants he takes, and does not wait for excuse. There is a lesson here for all neutrals, not omitting ourselves.

Some Of The Major Innovations To Date

By Lord Strabolgi.

THERE IS no means of knowing what developments in weapons or methods of using them will take place in the present war before it is concluded. It has produced a few surprises already which are worthy of study.

When I write of "surprises," I mean to the general public, and to the rank and file of the fighting men. The intelligence staffs of the opposing commands usually have a good deal of information of the new weapons and means of using them possessed by their enemies. For obvious reasons they conceal such knowledge while at the same time experimenting with antidotes. There may, for example, be some novelties in chemical warfare in existence. Poisonous gases and flame-throwers appeared as weapons in the war of 1914-1918. But apart from small successes in the first surprise attacks, chemical warfare made no fundamental changes in tactics.

THE MAGNETIC mine is new in that instead of being buoyant it lies on the bottom of the sea and is exploded by the passage of a large steel body, such as a great ship, setting up a magnetic field which actuates the delicate electric magnetism for firing the mine. Its advantage, from the enemy's point of view, is that it is difficult to clear by ordinary sweeping and also it can be adjusted to lie dormant for a period of time and then to become dangerous in an area where its presence had not been suspected. This is believed to be the secret weapon of which Herr Hitler boasted in the early part of the war; but he was misinformed if he believed there was no antidote. There are ways of creating a magnetic field, other than the passage of a big ship, and so of exploding a group of magnetic mines artificially, so to speak.

In the air the improvement of the materiel proceeds continually and with great rapidity. No sooner does a new type of warplane come into production than it is already obsolescent, owing to advances in the design of frames and of engines and the weapons carried made by the scientific and research staffs concerned. The large planes now at the disposal of the Allies have a great advantage in making revolving power-driven gun-turrets. The secret of this was well kept until the planes fitted with this revolving turret were produced in large numbers. It gives a great advantage in aerial combat.

The German aeroplane designers made the mistake of relying too much on mere speed and neglected fighting power and maneuverability. Thus the fighting machines of the French Curtiss type and the British Spitfires and Hurricanes are technically superior to the much advertised Messerschmitt. Not only are they better armed, but they are more easily maneuvered. The mounting of eight machine guns to fire simultaneously at the same target in the British fighters has been particularly successful.

All modern air forces are now developing various types of cannon firing small shells and some of them with a rapid rate of fire. Developments are taking place in the use of armor for the protection of the crew and vital parts. These armors must be light in weight and manufactured from special alloys.

In the early days of the ironclad warship a duel commenced between the high velocity gunmaker and the armor plate maker and this contest has gone on ever since, first one and then the other having the advantage. We are likely to see a repetition of this duel between the armor and the gun in air fighting.

In land warfare we have seen the use of soldiers dropped by parachute from aeroplanes by the Germans in the Polish campaign and by the Russians in the Finnish campaign. This was no surprise as several armies, notably the Russians, had developed this idea during the last few years. Thus far it has not been used on a large scale, but only for dropping behind the enemy's lines small parties of soldiers, sometimes in disguise, or even in the uniforms of the enemy, in order to attack vulnerable points, blow up railway bridges, etc. Single spies were dropped at night by parachutes in the last war on enemy territory, and the carrying of whole battalions to be landed by parachute has been developed since.

The only new tactics in land fighting, so far developed, has been in the Polish campaign. There the Germans used, with great success shock tactics by mechanized land forces working in conjuction with overwhelmingly strong air forces. Without troubling about lines of communication or the possibility of flank attacks, these rapidly moving divisions of fast tanks and armored cars thrust into enemy territory through any gaps discovered by the aeroplanes.

The weakness of the mechanized division acting practically independently and far in advance of its main body is that it is a vulnerable target to air attack if the opposing side can concentrate sufficient planes for the purpose. There is an element of surprise here and it succeeded in Poland.

THERE HAS BEEN a tactical surprise at sea in the battle off Montevideo when the German pocket-battleship Graf von Spee was attacked by three smaller cruisers and defeated, despite her far more powerful armament.

The full details of this action are not yet available. Enough is known to indicate that the victory was won by the greater speed of the three British cruisers which enabled them to attack the more powerful German vessel from three directions simultaneously, and by the skillful use of smoke screens. The attackers laid these smoke screens and then suddenly appeared through them at comparatively short range, thus having the advantage of the very rapid fire of their smaller guns. When the details of this extraordinary action are available, a new tactical principle in sea fighting will be demonstrated.

WHAT FURTHER surprises may we anticipate?

Apart from new war gases, of which there are plentiful reports, we may expect novelties in a long range artillery. The World War produced one such novelty in the "Big Bertha" which bombarded Paris from Laon, a distance of 73 miles (118 kilometers). This was a gun of 8.26-inch caliber (210 mm.) Its effect was nil from the military point of view, and its psychological terrors wore off after a time. There are current reports of a Nazi super-Bertha with a range of 155 miles (250 kilometers) and it is described as of 11.02-inch caliber (280 mm) firing a shell of 661 pounds (300 kilogrammes). Such a gun is likely to wear out quickly and so to have a short life. It is technically possible to produce such a weapon and the intention, it is reported, is to fire it from the Dutch coast at London after a successful invasion of Holland.

There are persistent rumors of German developments in large rockets carrying an explosive charge and capable of very long flights. One form reported is of a veritable aeroplane power and able to travel long distances with a certain degree of accuracy. But all this class of invention designed primarily for moral effect, is of no lasting military value.

Stenographer's Dream

"What about your health, Miss Minch?"

"My health's all right, Mr. Flint. What about yours?"

"Mine!"

"Yes, I trust you havn't any dyspepsia, nervous indigestion, hives, neuralgia, lumbago, sinus trouble——"

"What do you mean?"

"Well, Mr. Flint, I make it a practise never to work for a man who has ailments—or nerves——"

"Say, who's doing this hiring?"

"Both of us are. Another thing, Mr. Flint, do you dictate with a cigar in your mouth?"

"What business of that is yours?"

"It's very much my business. I have to take the dictation. Also after dictating a letter, do you demand a copy of it five minutes later?

"Well if I do——"

"Well if you do, I'm afraid we can't do business. Also do you look over your secretary's shoulder when she's typewriting?"

"Why not?"

"Because it makes most women nervous. Also, Mr. Flint are you on good terms with your wife?"

"Say this is going too far——"

"But I make it a practice never to work for a man who has rows on the telephone with his wife. Also is your wife the kind who would insist that I call you out of conference?"

"This is getting too personal"

"It is better to get personal now than later. Another thing, does your wife have much shopping?"

"That's none of your business?"

"It is very much my business if I have to do the shopping . . . Now a few questions about yourself. Do you believe in ectoplasm?"

"Ectoplasm?"

"Well, would you always expect me to materialize before your eyes the minute you wanted me?"

"I don't understand."

"You wouldn't. I'm afraid we cant do business Mr. Flint."

"Say, wait a minute——"

"It's no use. I don't think we can get together."

"Let me explain——"

"I'll give you one more chance, Mr. Flint. Do you ever make a mistake?"

"Mistake! ME make a mistake——"

"That's all I wanted to know, Mr. Flint, Goodbye."

Peasants Had a Hand in This

Poignantly enough, this may be one of America's last evidences of European handcrafts—embroideries from the Balkans and Russia. Gizella Shows Peasant Work Of High Art

Fine Embroidery Of Central Europe Rapidly Vanishing

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor

DISAPPEARING almost as fast as authentic aboriginal American art is the fine peasant embroidery of Europe. It seems unfortunate that an art as highly developed as central Europe's handwork should come to so quick a demise due to the war. But, according to Gizella, a Hungarian now in this country, there will be no more work from the hands of former Czechs, Bohemians, the artistic Viennese, or even the Russians.

Gizella, which is the only name the attractive Viennese designer is known by in this country, visited Washington this week and brought with her an exhibition of now rare peasant embroideries. These are on display and for purchase throughout the week at a local shop where their brilliant colorings, intricate hand workmanship and unusual designs are already attracting attention.

These embroideries are not just "by the yard," but have been transposed by Gizella into unique "at home" gowns, three-piece sports suits, dinner and spectator frocks and an assortment of clever little boleros, jackets, capes and lightweight topcoats.

The haunting, wistful touch of the peasant is everywhere in these clothes—in the floral motif of wool embroidered borders on a white flannel sports suit, and in Czech cross-stitch patterns on a black cheer wool butcher-boy jacket suit. There is also a barbaric flash of color on white linen blouses and dark tunic frocks from Russian peasants.

Celebrities Flock To New Lum Fong Restaurant Uptown

New York, April 10.

HAVE YOU ever noticed that the personalities of the proprietors of Chinese restaurants seem to fade into the red lacquer? In fact, I was never able to locate such a landlord, until I met Lum Fong at his famous catery down on Canal street, at the northern brink of our Chinatown. This was years back.

Mr. Lum is a buxom, moon-faced Oriental who is a real personality. He wears a perpetual smile which is from the heart out, and not a mere property. His cookery is superb, and he and his downtown spot have long been favorites with stage people and newspapermen, especially cartoonists, who often fill a long table there, and make merry and well-stuffed until far into the night. George Jessel is a regular, and so are Gracie Allen and George Burns when in town.

Well, the other night Lum opened a bright new place uptown, on West Fifty-second street, and it was a gala business. All his old friends and customers were invited to eat a superb meal on the house, and Mr. Lum wore a beam a foot wide. This big-hearted Chinese is really happiest when he is surrounded by clients having a fine time for themselves. All the cartoonists, such as Ham Fisher and Chic Young, were out in force, and among the ladies I spotted were Actress Lenore Ulric, former Dancer. June O'Dea, who is now the wife of Lefty El Goofo Gomez, of our Yankee baseball club, and Pegeen Fitzgerald, the blonde radio talker.

I hear that one of the new songs in Billy Rose's water show at the Fair, come May, is called "Eleanor," probably a salute to his child bride, La Holm. Then again, it may be a salute to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Herbert Lehman, wife of our Governor, has written the autobiography of the mansion in Albany, with the house itself speaking in the first person. It starts, "Since many of you have never seen me, it is fitting that I should, first of all, introduce myself. I make no claim to beauty." Well, it's a good thing it isn't Madame Governor herself speaking, for, claim or no claim, she is my idea of a really beautiful woman.

Unscheduled 'Snack' Spoils Strict Diet

No Miracles Result From Attempts To Reduce Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

IN THESE days, nobody is silly enough to expect something for nothing, but we still expect an awful lot for something. When a woman pays to reduce, she stands by for miracles!

Take Mrs. Brown . . . she went to a sanitarium and informed the dietitian in charge that she wanted to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. That is not unreasonable, so the dietitian said all right and planned menus accordingly. And what happened? At the end of the first fortnight Mrs. B. had gained a couple of pounds!

Besides dieting, Mrs. B. had been taking either steam baths or heavy massage every day. Now, steam cabinet baths are not expressly designed for comfort. And heavy massage is not what you order for soothing the nerves! You only go in for those treatments when you are serious about being slim, like Mrs. Brown!

Mrs. B. Overcompensated

There was just one hitch in the whole program. Although Mrs. B. had paid to reduce, and had done everything scheduled, she had done one thing not on the schedule. After she completed her daily reducing stint, she drove down to the village drugstore for a little afternoon refreshment that added more calories than the dietitian could subtract from three regular meals!

It's only a guess, but probably Mrs. B. reasoned that you get what you pay for and sometimes more, and also that if you discipline yourself severely in one direction you should be allowed to compensate to a slight degree in another. Evidently, she overcompensated.

Now, before you put Mrs. B. down as a silly creature who deserved what she got, how about your own ideas on compensation? Dieting for three meals a day does not entitle you to an unscheduled afternoon tea. Or to a midnight snack.

Classed As Delayed Desserts

The number of calories you take day by day—or the number you do not take—determines the headway you make at reducing. Afternoon snacks may be classed as delayed desserts. If you take them regularly every afternoon, you cannot with a clear conscience claim to be "dieting."

And, if you do restrict yourself to a diet, don't assume that it covers everything. Certainly, you can count on losing 1 pound for every 4,000 calories left out of the number required to maintain your weight where it is. But that does not mean your diet can do anything about your measurements. Emphatically, it cannot.

When you wake up to the necessity of improving measurements. If you want to increase the bust measurements, and slim the waist and hips, you must plan your exercises and execute them according to your needs.

And once you are sold on exercise, don't let it make you forget about dieting! In your program for gaining a lovely figure, you are not excused from anything! That is, anything that will help to give you a lovely figure, and that means rigid diet with no between-meal calories, and specific exercise.

Boy, 20, Is Doggedly Determined to Prevent Girl He Loves From Marrying Another; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man aged 20, very much in love with a girl several years my senior. Our tastes and ideals are similar for the most part. We have known each other since Christmas. Two months ago she told me of her plans to be married this summer to another man, who is only one year younger than she. Recently, she told me again that she definitely expects to marry him this summer. I have told her that I do not intend to permit it.

She says that she loves me but in a different way. We are together occasionally and have thoroughly discussed our feelings. Her decision to marry the other man disturbs me greatly and I am beginning to fear, that I cannot persuade her to reconsider; even though she says she believes I would do as much for her as she could ask.

I am unwilling to stop seeing her; in fact, one might say that I am doggedly stubborn in my ambition to win her. I do not intend to drop out of the race, as I have never known a girl in whom I believed so completely—even though she has her shortcomings. Incidentally, we are fellow students in the same university here. Any suggestions you can give me will be much appreciated. ANXIOUS.

"Keep Free as an Arab Of Thy Beloved——"

DEAR ANXIOUS: I have no suggestions to offer in the direction of messing up this girl's marriage plans, in order to gratify your childish frenzy to have your way, whether or no. If she loved you in a manner which would justify marriage from her viewpoint), no doubt she would act accordingly. Since it is apparent that she doesn't; that she prefers another man for her husband and cares for you "in a different way," it behooves you to accept the fact with decent composure.

Your alleged love of her isn't worth much; is, indeed, an inverted expression of infantile self-love, when it takes the figurative form of attempted seizure-by-force; or cry-baby clinging, or would-be crafty sabotage of her previously made marriage plans. Real love—of the kind that is "twice blest; (that) blesseth him that gives and him that takes,"—is essentially altruistic in spirit and manifestation, in that it desires and seeks to promote the happiness of the beloved. It is not self-concerned and self-serving—and yet this seems to be the essential nature and objective of your address to this girl.

Ralph Waldo Emerson has written an oft-quoted poem called, "Give All to Love," in which he outlines a credo for lovers which you might do well to adopt. Among other things he says, ". . . Give all to love . . . yet, hear me, yet, . . . keep thee today, tomorrow, forever, free as an Arab, of thy beloved. . . .

Cling with life to the maid;
But when the surprise,
Vaguest shadow of surmise,
Flits across her bosom young
Of a joy apart from thee,
Free be she, fancy-free.
Do not thou detain a hem,
Nor the palest rose she flung
From her summer diadem.

Though thou' loved her as thyself,
As a self of purer clay,
Tho' her parting dims the day,
Stealing grace from all alive,
Heartily know,
When half-gods go,
The gods arrive."

Good Manners Aid Popularity

HER first big party—she's so eager to do everything right! But, alas, she hasn't checked up on etiquette.

The young man to whom she's just been introduced bows politely—then walks away. "What's the matter?" she puzzles, never dreaming it's her place to start the conversation with the man after an introduction. When she says nothing, he naturally thinks she doesn't want to talk to him.

But any girl—even though she is just starting out socially—can appear poised, sophisticated, if she knows her etiquette. And the rules are easily learned.

Are you and your date motoring to a dance at the country club? Ask him to let you out at the door before he parks his car. If you get "stuck" while dancing, diplomatically suggest looking up your escort, making a trade in partners.

At movies, restaurants—everywhere—you are judged by your manners, so make them good! Are you one of a foursome? Don't forget that at the movies one man goes first into the row of seats, then the two girls, the other man last. But in a restaurant the two girls follow the head waiter, the two men bring up the rear.

And, when entertaining at home, remember your new friends' impression of your manners. If your dinner guest is a man, seat him at your mother's right, sit at his right.

Feel poised, sure of yourself—when dining, entertaining, visiting, motoring, at dances, theaters, on dates—by knowing the rules in our 40-page booklet, "Etiquette for the Teens." Gives you the smart modern code for girls, young men. Has pointers on introductions, invitations, telephone and business etiquette. Gives advice on the petting question.

How to Plan A Child's Closet

A child's closet needs only a short space for hanging clothes but drawer, shelf or pigeon-hole space is doubly needed. If you don't want ot go in for carpentry, then put a small chest of drawers or some of those wall papered shoe cabinets of drawer sections you buy in the closet or notion department. Or a lift lid toy chest is a practical piece of furniture for a youthful closet. Along with a gay design and cheerful colors that inspire neatness. It's easy and cheap to perk up a child's closet—decorate with ABC's or with cut-outs from story books pasted on and shellacked down.

Eggnog Flavor Delectable in Desserts

THE PLEASANT flavor of eggnog need not be confined to New Year's Day when one rallies around the wassail bowl. There are other versions of serving eggnog's delectable flavor that are correspondingly good. Two especially appealing eggnog flavored dishes are Coffee and Rum Ring and Frozen Eggnog. Both are nutritious because of the eggs, milk and cream contained in them.

Chef Lewis, of Harvey's Restaurant, gave me his specially developed recipes for making these two delicious desserts. When you are wanting an especially good dessert surprise that will boost your reputation as a hostess try one of Chef Lewis' recipes.

Coffee and Rum Ring

Dissolve 4 teaspoons gelatin in ½ cup cold water. Add 1 cup boiling water and 1½ tablespoons sugar. Cool. Add 2 cups very strong warm coffee and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Stir well. Pour into ring mold. Chill several hours. Make the rum macaroon cream just before serving.

Whip 1½ cups cream, sweeten slightly and flavor with Ronrico rum and then add 1 cup crumbled macaroons. When ready to serve turn coffee mold out and fill center with cream filling.

Frozen Eggnog

Beat 6 eggs and 1½ cups sugar until light. Pour 1 quart scalded milk on the eggs. Put in a double-boiler and cook over low heat until it coats a spoon. Cool. Strain. Add ½ teaspoon salt, 6 ounces brandy, 6 ounces Ronrico rum and fold in 1 pint cream which has been whipped. Freeze in refrigerator tray.

Dinner Parties Headline Capital Social Activities

Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas Guests of Honor at Function Given By Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller

By Hope Ridings Miller

DINING OUT was the social order of last evening when a record round of parties accented the whirl; and diplomats, debutantes and high-ranking officials were feted all over the place.

Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas were the guests in whose honor Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller entertained a company of 22 at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Miller, who writes under the name of May Merrill Miller, has been working hours on end recently to complete her second novel; but she has also been taking some time out to entertain with her husband at a series of dinners.

Last evening's party was one of the most pleasant of the season and gathered in a congenial group that mixed literature, politics and summer vacation plans into its table talk. The company gathered in the Miller apartment and then went to the Madison room of the hotel, where dinner was served at a long table, which was decorated with spring blossoms and tall tapers in silver candelabra.

Guests included Representative and Mrs. Thomas F. Ford and Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who hail from California, home State of Justice and Mrs. Miller; the Congressional Librarian and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, Dr. and Mrs. Wesley A. Sturges, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis B. Monfort, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Madden, Mr and Mrs. Henry P. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederick Essary, Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller, Mrs. Irene Caldwell and E. K. Gubin.

THE ITALIAN AMBASSADOR, Prince Colonna, and the Spanish Envoy and Senora de Cardenas were ranking guests at the dinner given by the Egyptian Minister and Mme. Hassan.

Others in the company were the Bulgarian Minister and Mme. Naoumoff, Senator and Mrs. A. B. Chandler, Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, the Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, the Marquis de Zahara; Col. and Mrs. John Magruder, Col. and Mrs. John H. Crane.

Still others there were Mrs. Lucile Ogston, Mrs. Donne Moore, Miss Beatrice Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Venable Allen, Miss Helene Kravadze, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Rowlker, of New York, and Ali Foad Toulba and Hussein Hosni, of the Egyptian Legation staff.

THE MINISTER OF YUGOSLAVIA and Mme. Fotitch entertained 21 guests at dinner, having as their ranking guests the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, and the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann.

Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton were dinner hosts at the Sulgrave Club, and had as their ranking guests the Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora de Martins and the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban. The event was the second of its kind that the Bartons have given this season, and like the one which took place last week was announced as "a small party." I don't know how many were present last night; but the first dinner drew 64 guests—61 of whom were Republicans.

STILL ANOTHER GAY DINNER on last night's round was the one given by Miss Carolyn Nash in honor of the Misses Isabelle and Marjorie Meuser, cousins of Arthur Bradley Campbell, who will be presented to society here next week, and Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree, who made her bow here last season under the aegis of her uncle, Clarence Hewes.

The 1925 F Street Club was the scene of the gathering, which drew the younger set in droves. Incidentally, Miss Nash, who makes her home in Paris, has spent the past winter in this country but will return to Europe soon. She will leave here Monday for New York and will sail April 20 on the Manhattan. According to present plans she will drive an ambulance for the American Hospital at Neuilly, France.

About the Town

G. O. P. Headquarters Busy as Staff Prepares for Presidential Campaign

AN ATMOSPHERE OF cheerful hope prevails these days in the offices of the Republican National Committee on Jackson place. Extra messengers, stenographers and publicity workers taken on in the past few weeks gives the place a bustling air. But officials point out that in line with the famous Republican ideals of economy they are hiring comparatively few until June, when final plans for the convention get under way.

For the conventions four years ago both Republicans and Democrats selected official hostesses—Mrs. Alvin T. Hert and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman. So far the question of hostesses for this summer has not been projected.

AN INNOVATION AT Republican headquarters this year is the appointment of eight women as "regional representatives." They travel about the country conferring with committeewomen and county leaders in the different States. Young Eileen O'Daniel, of Washington, who was head of the student government when she was at Smith College, is one of them. The appointment of another, Mrs. Grace B. Reynolds, of Indiana, was announced yesterday.

MRS. RUTH SHIPLEY, chief of the State Department's passport division, is the subject of an extensive article by Maxine Davis which will appear in the Saturday Evening Post May 11. There's tremendous interest in the passport problem what with the war, neutrality law, and so forth, but Mrs. Shipley refused to be interviewed for the article, and, it's said, is not pleased that it's to come out.

PHYLLIS RUSSELL, of New York, a goddaughter of Vincent Astor, is visiting Washington after a stay in Middleburg, and a baffled young man from Virginia would like to know exactly where she is staying. After a recent ride with him and some other friends in the hunt country she left behind some riding equipment which he is anxious to return immediately.

WHAT WITH GRIDIRON festivities and numerous other parties, this week-end promises to be the gayest in a long time. Among those entertaining at cocktail parties on Sunday will be Mrs. Francis Whitten and Mrs. Esther Norment.

THE NEWLY ARRIVED American Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. George Messersmith met two former Presidents of Cuba and Col. Batista, the coalition candidate for that office, as well as practically every other Cuban dignitary at a recent luncheon given for them by Ambassador Fraga. There were 140 high-ranking officials at the party, which took place at the Hotel Nacional in Havana. Maj. Gen. Marion G. Menocal and the Cuban secretaries of state, commerce and Treasury were also in the party.

Dr. Fraga has been in Havana several weeks and it is not known when he will return to his post in Washington.

THERE SEEMS TO have been some disagreement about who rushed up to whom when the Polish Ambassador met the wife of the German Charge d'Affaires at a recent hunt meet. It was reported yesterday that Count Potocki had dashed up to Frau Thomsen to speak to her, but witnesses deny that he engaged her in conversation.

Rep. Wadsworth's Son to Visit D. C. On Way South

Assemblyman and Mrs. James J. Wadsworth are arriving in Washington this week-end from New York to visit his father, Representative James Wadsworth, at his home in Georgetown. They are en route south and will leave their daughter, Miss Alice Ann Wadsworth, here for a fortnight to visit with her grandparents. The younger Wadsworths plan to visit Camden, S. C., on their Southern tour.

Representative Wadsworth's wife, who has been in South Caroline, recuperating from an operation, is planning to return to their home here April 15.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Blackstone Smith announce the birth of a son, Thomas Ashmead Smith, on March 28.

Luncheon to Honor Mme. Jenkins

Mme. Florence Foster Jenkins will arrive in Washington next week from New York City. On Thursday, April 18, she will give her annual recital at the Washington Club. Mme. Jenkins, well-known soprano, will be guest of honor at a luncheon at Hotel 2400 after her concert.

Patrons for this event include Col. and Mrs. W. B. Buckley, Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Breeding, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Bowne, Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, Miss Angela Carman, Mrs. Joseph Herbert, Mrs. Helen Homer, Dr. B. Bartlett James, William Manger, Col. William John Moore, Mr. and Mrs. John Ball Osborne, Miss Margaret Louise O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Walton and Mrs. George Carter Lafferty.

Notables Become Patrons for Recital By Reino Luoma

Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, wife of Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Amelia Huerick and Mrs. George B. Parker are among the recent subscribers for the musicale to be presented by the 20-year-old Finnish pianist, Reino Luoma at the Sulgrave Club on April 18, at 4 p. m.

This musicale is being sponsored by friends and music lovers of Washington who are familiar with the youth's ability. During the past two years the young pianist has featured many musicales here. He has twice been guest soloist with the National Symphony and recently donated his services for many local benefit concerts.

As he is the only Finnish concert artist in America, he has been sought for numerous Finnish benefit concerts throughout the land, and has had to decline for lack of traveling funds. His supporters, headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope are sponsoring this concert to assist the Finnish cause and also to aid the deserving young artist. Reservations can be made through Miss La Verne Roberts at the Dupont Circle apartments.

Concert at Phillips Gallery to Benefit Paul Brightenburg

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips have loaned the Phillips Memorial Gallery for a benefit concert on Monday afternoon, April 29, at 5 o'clock, in which members of Capital society are taking a great interest.

Beneficiary will be Paul Brightenburg, member of the National Symphony Orchestra and organizer of the Washington String Quartet. Several years ago he was stricked with a serious infection and is only now getting back on his feet after two years at Emergency Hospital and over 200 blood transfusions.

Mrs. Barton K. Yount, of Stoneleigh Court, is chairman of the committee arranging the concert. Members include Mrs. Harold A. Brooks, Mrs. Charles Bittinger, Mrs. W. Calhoun Stirling, Mrs. Colgate Darden, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Walter H. Nash, Mme. Linda Sokoloff, Mrs. William L. Pitcher, Mrs. James F. Olive, jr., Mrs. Mary I. Couch and Mrs. Carl A. Spaatz.

It was expected that Frances Nash (Mrs. Edwin Watson), would play, but her recent illness, which prevented her from appearing with the Philadelphia Orchestra, will prevent her from taking part.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white marquisette gown with insertions of lace. The gown was made on Empire lines with long sleeves, a square neckline and full, circular train. She carried a prayerbook from which fell a shower of lilies of the valley. Her finger-tip length veil fell from a coronet of orange blossoms.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Cyril Paul Murphy, of Merion, Pa., sister-in-law of the bride, who wore a gown of aqua chiffon with insertions of lace. She carried an arm bouquet of pale pink roses. Her matching hat was of chiffon and tulle. Cyril P. Murphy, brother of the bridegroom, of Merion, Pa., served as best man.

Immediately following the ceremony, there was a reception in the Madison suite of the Wardman Park Hotel for members of the immediate families. Mrs. McNamara wore a navy blue and white chiffon gown and a corsage of gardenias.

When the couple left for their wedding trip, a cruise to Puerto Rico, the bride wore a three-piece ensemble of mountain mist gray and navy blue accessories. Mr. Murphy attended the University of Pennsylvania. The couple will make their home in Alden Park Manor, Germantown, Philadelphia.

Dr. Eric Englund Tells A. A. U. W. About Taxes

All Levies Involved Must Be Considered As a Whole, He Says

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Citizens must "think of the whole bundle of taxes which are used to raise revenue for a community," Dr. Eric Englund told members of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women last night.

"We must look to the equitableness of the system as a whole under which one tax might offset some of the injustices of another and wherein one tax might make up for the revenue deficiencies of another."

Dr. Englund, who is assistant chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, addressed a dinner meeting arranged at the clubhouse, 1634 I street northwest, by the legislative committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Eugene Callaghan. Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the club, presided. The program included a sketch in verse, dealing with taxes, given by the Misses Floreine Hurley, Mary Vaccaro, Jacquelyn Pringle, Mildred Wharton and Marie Gurley.

Dr. Englund, talking on taxes in general, avoided giving definite opinions on the local tax situation which has been the subject of the legislative committee's recent study.

He said a properly conceived income tax was as nearly unchallengeable as could be on the grounds of fairness to the taxpayer. From the fiscal standpoint, however, it has the disadvantage of sharp fluctuation in the amount it yields. He criticized the sales tax because of its regressive action although, he said, with food exempt, it does not burden those with annual incomes of less than $900.

If a general sales tax were levied in the District, not all of it would be passed on to the consumer although it would be passed on more fully through some commodities than others, he believes.

He did not express a specific opinion as to property taxes for the District, but said "in the general sense, the District of Columbia real estate tax is comparatively mild when related to real estate taxes in many other parts of the country."

In 1938, when the District tax rate was $1.75 per $100 of full assessed value, the property tax was higher than this in seven States of the Union, said Dr. Englund. He cited Maine, $2.58; New Hampshire, $2.18; Massachusetts, $1.97; New York, $1.87; New Jersey, $1.90; Arizona, $1.84, and Nevada, $1.77. These had a tax rate on farm real estate materially higher than the tax rate on District of Columbia real estate, he pointed out.

Honor guests at the dinner were Representative Everett Dirksen, of Illinois; George J. Bates, of Massachusetts; Jim Seccombe, of Ohio, and Harry Sandager, of Rhode Island.

Others were Mrs. Englund, David Cushman Coyle, economist and author, and Mrs. Coyle; Herbert S. Wood, of Internal Revenue, who has been adviser to the committe on tax problems; Judge Fay Bentley, Dr. and Mrs. George Ruhland, and Dean Van Vleck.

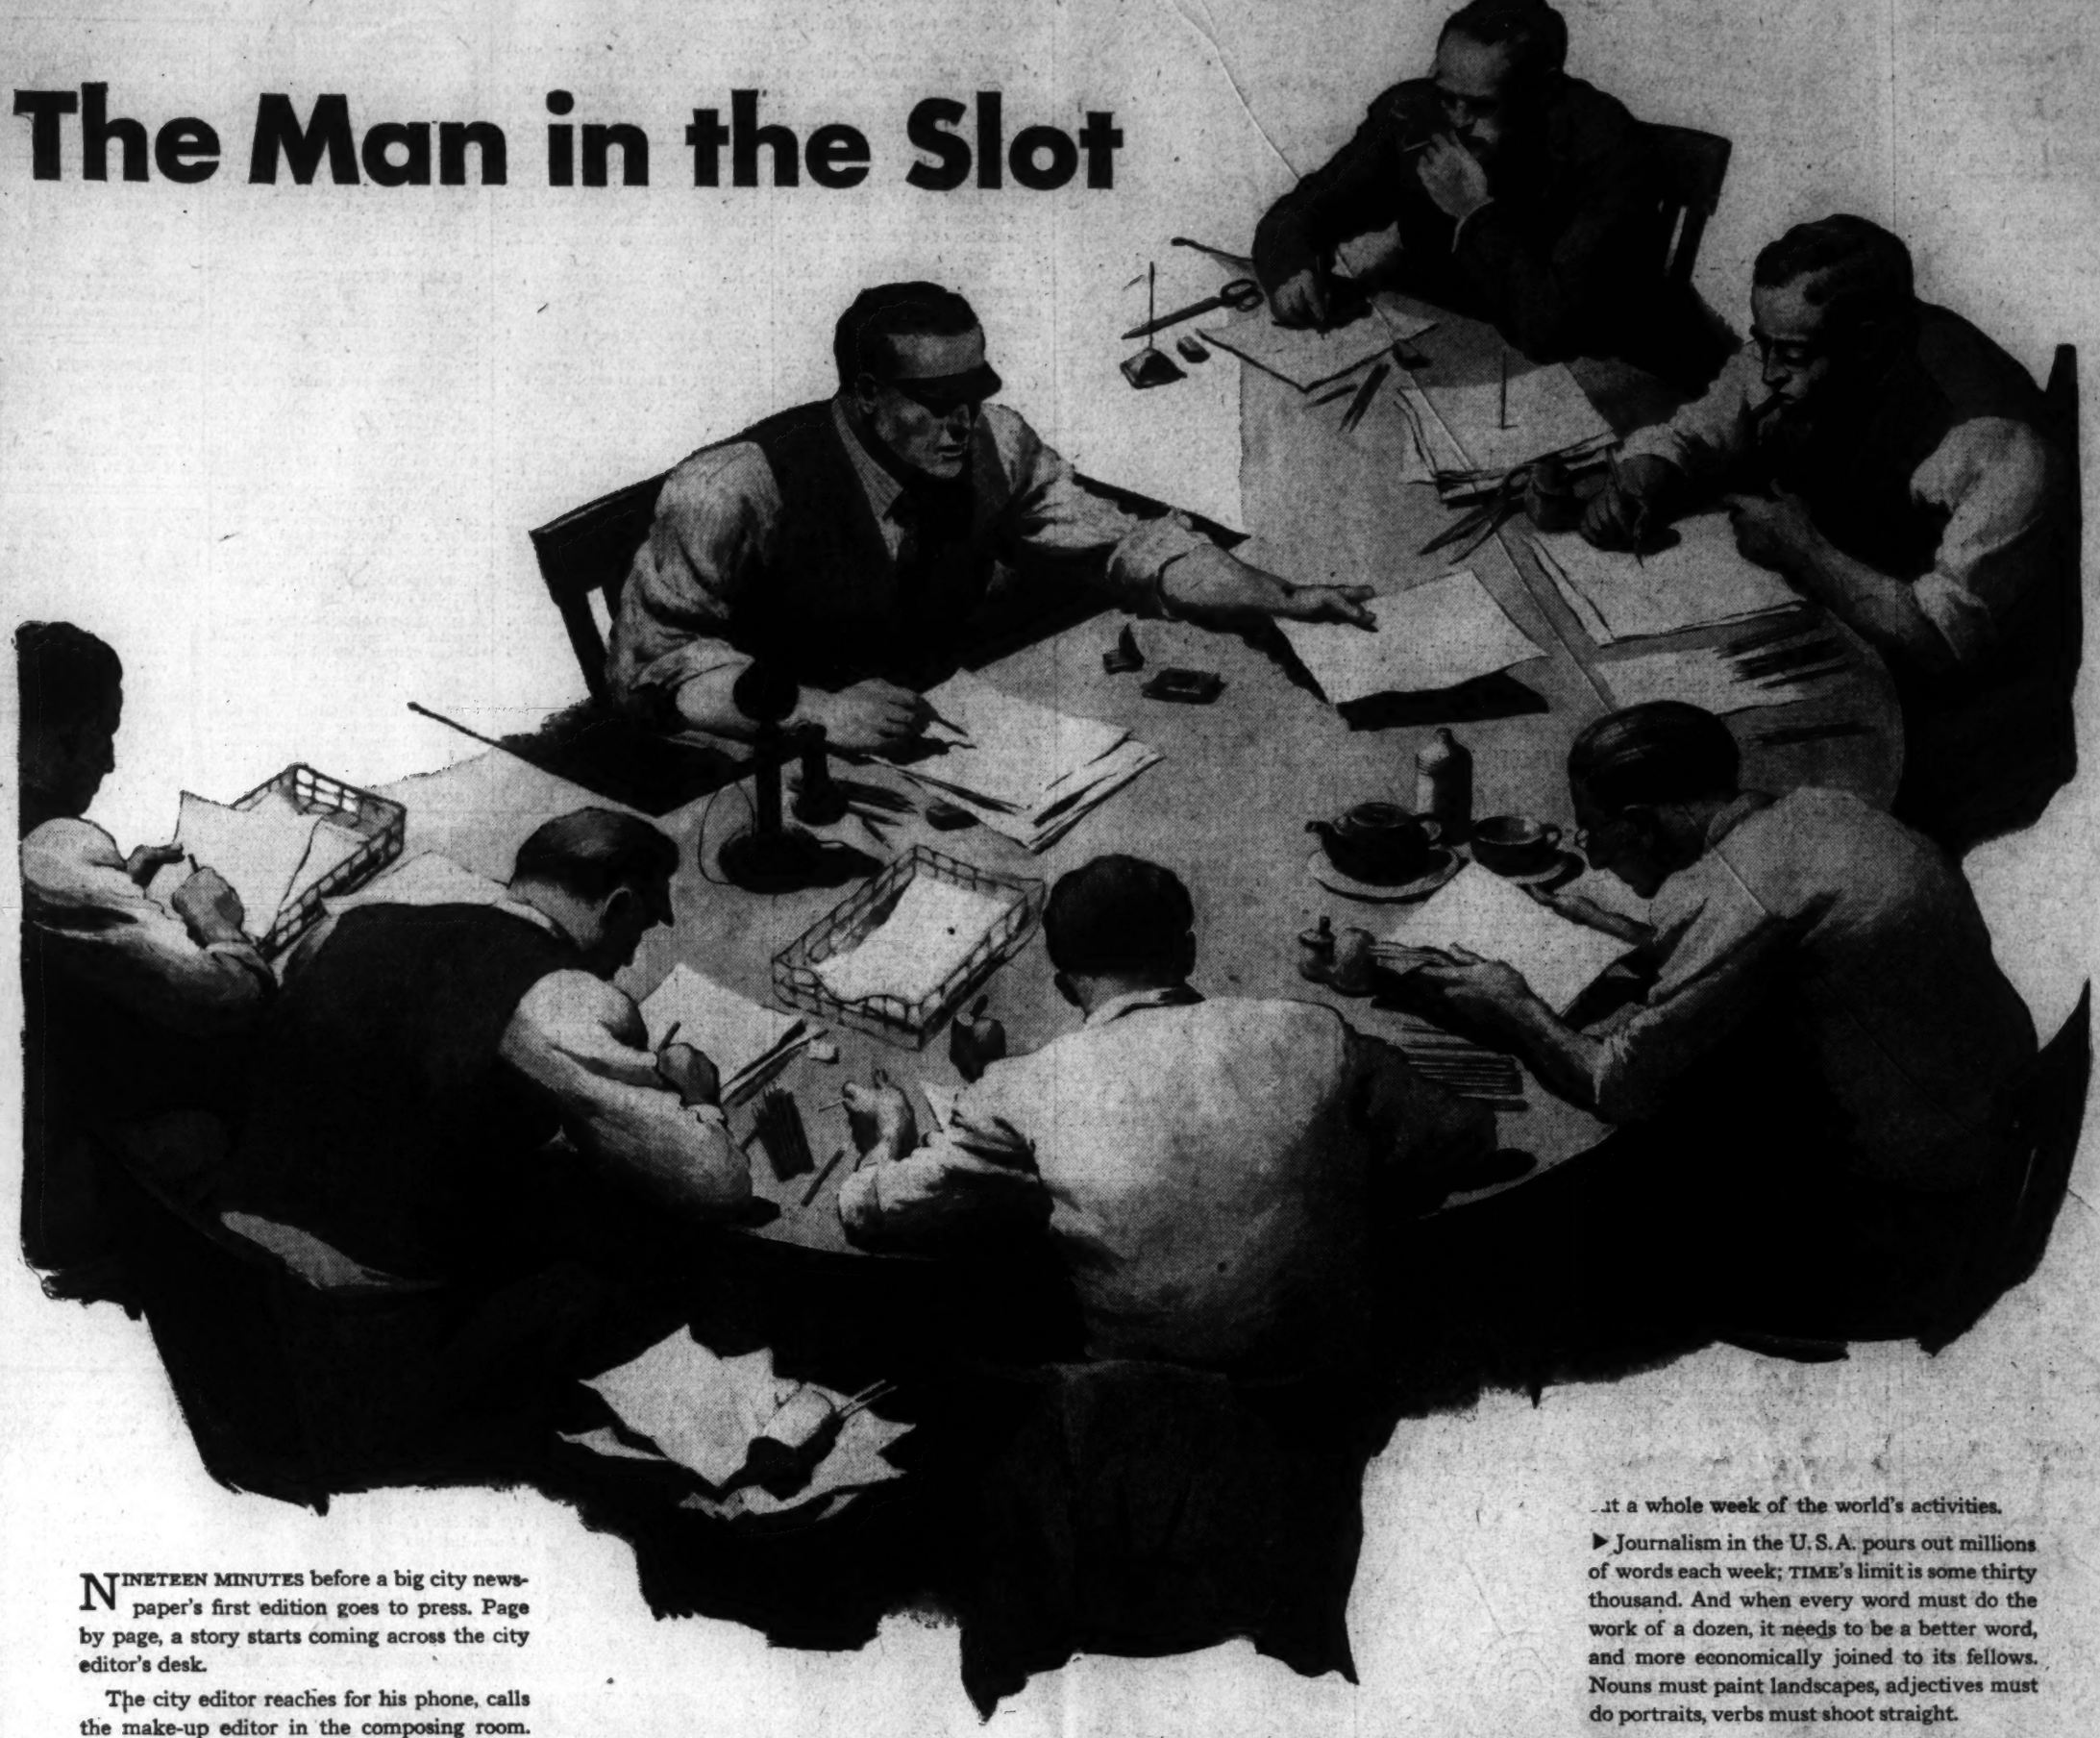
The Man in the Slot



NINETEEN MINUTES before a big city newspaper's first edition goes to press. Page by page, a story starts coming across the city editor's desk.

The city editor reaches for his phone, calls the make-up editor in the composing room. "How we doing?" he asks. "This City Hall story looks pretty hot."

"We're going to be tight. Keep it down," warns the make-up editor. "We can't squeeze the Washington story another inch."

"Okay," responds the city editor. He looks at the penciled layout for Page One, scribbles some figures in the upper corner of the sheet of copy, and with an expert twist sends it sailing onto the big horseshoe desk next to his own.

"We're tight, Mac," he calls to the man in the slot. "Cut it a third."

▶ Seventeen minutes now to the deadline... only ten for cutting, editing, headline-writing. For those vital ten minutes, the responsibility rests on the shoulders of the man in the slot... newspaper parlance for the head of the copy desk.

A dozen considerations flash their chain lightning patterns across the slot man's mind. Tyler's story...Tyler the brilliant and touchy. He got it out of that certain municipal department which is giving off a faintly gamy odor. The boss will want it in all editions. This isn't the big break though, just another build-up to it. Damn good story...real stuff in every paragraph. Hard to cut. Needs a headline with sock. Who's to handle it? Ward's fooling around with that zoo story...Won't do, his cuts make Tyler sore. Colihan's a better bet.

"Colihan," says the man in the slot. One of the furious pencil-wielders around the rim of the horseshoe looks up. "Cut this a third and put a thirty-six head on it in time for the bulldog."

All this has used up fifteen seconds.

Colihan has nine and a half minutes to cut and edit and write a top headline and subheadline. Every line of both headlines must count exactly so many characters and spaces, figuring i as a half and m and w one and a half characters.

Then the slot man will take just fifteen seconds more to review Colihan's work, change "banned" to "curbed," sniff the whole concoction for traces of libel, and shoot it to the news editor in the composing room.

It is a shorter story than Tyler's original, and a better one—keener of edge, swifter of impact, yet complete in every essential detail.

▶ The slot is not a glamorous job. It hasn't been discovered by Shubert Alley or the fiction magazines. To the cub reporter, eager for bylines and self-expression, the whole copy desk looks like a backwater. It takes maturity—grasp of the whole art of news presentation—to appreciate the little miracles that a good copy desk passes.

Watch what a copy-reader is really doing—you'll see agility and speed to make an Olympic skier look muscle-bound. Clearing hurdles of phrases in one long broad jump of the pencil. Untying sloppy granny knots, retying the thought strands square—and always on the dead run. Swooping over a field of facts and leaning out to pick the tallest one. Doing the cross-word puzzles called headlines against a time limit and for high stakes.

Among the men who write and edit The Weekly Newsmagazine, the man in the slot and the men on the rim are held in greater respect, perhaps, than in their own city rooms. For more than any other newspapermen in the business, TIME men write with the consciousness that they must cut, prune, hone, concentrate, and distil. The fight against the clock is not so desperate on a weekly, but the battle for each line of space is many times fiercer.

And the raw material for each issue is mountain-high... product of TIME's own 75 correspondents, 500 news scouts, and the 100,000 correspondents and reporters of all the nation's newspapers and wire services, through-

...it a whole week of the world's activities.

▶ Journalism in the U.S.A. pours out millions of words each week; TIME's limit is some thirty thousand. And when every word must do the work of a dozen, it needs to be a better word, and more economically joined to its fellows. Nouns must paint landscapes, adjectives must do portraits, verbs must shoot straight.

Each story in TIME must be direct, keen, complete; each story must earn its place as an essential link in understanding the world's news of the week.

▶ TIME has developed the art of news condensation, as practiced by the slot men and rim men of the dailies, to a new high. For every issue of TIME is "tight"—its limit that irreducible minimum of news every intelligent man and woman must know. Which is one reason why TIME has won the genuine devotion of 700,000 busy families—with their ranks growing deeper every week.

This is one of a series of advertisements in which the Editors of TIME hope to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of the world of news-gathering, news-writing, and news-reading—and the part TIME plays in helping you to grasp, measure, and use the history of your lifetime as you live the story of your life.

Fatal Blaze Laid to D. C. Aide's Plans

Smoke Inspector's Assistant Designed Faulty Chimney, Inquest Is Told

Blame for the White Court apartment house fire April 1 which cost three lives was placed squarely on the District Building's doorstep yesterday by one witness.

Testifying at a coroner's inquest, Stephen Miles Montgomery, secretary and rental agent for H. G. Smithy Co., which operated the 2131 O street apartment, asserted under oath that an assistant to H. Kenneth Kugel, District smoke inspector, drew up the plans for enlargement of the building's chimney, and that these plans were followed.

Tuesday, when the inquest opened, fire experts testified that the chimney was defective and the most probable cause of the blaze, which killed two women and one man tenant.

Coroner A. Magruder Macdonald adjourned the hearing at 4:30 p. m. until 11 a. m. tomorrow, when the case is expected to reach the jury.

The testimony of Montgomery, together with that of a Negro bricklayer who expanded the stack, and of the destroyed structure's resident manager, highlighted the second day of an investigation which may have wide repercussions between Capitol Hill and the District Building.

Explaining that the Smithy real estate firm became agent for the White Court in 1934, Montgomery said that three years later his office received complaints against smoke conditions at the apartment house and he, consequently, conferred with the District smoke inspector.

Montgomery said he was told that either the coal furnace must be replaced by oil or a stoker installed. A Philadelphia company subsequently was given a contract to put in a new boiler and a stoker at a cost of $3,000.

Stack Too Small Then

"Then I was told the stack would be too small," Montgomery testified. "I went down to the smoke inspector's office to try to get out of that requirement, on account of the expense involved, but it was useless."

Kugel's assistant, he continued, thereupon drafted a sketch of what the enlarged chimney should look like and suggested that Montgomery, while he was in the building, go directly to the building inspector's office for the permit.

The Smithy official said he did and received the permit, after an assistant to Building Inspector John W. Oehmann had inspected the sketch and telephoned the smoke inspector's office for verification.

In reply to questioning, Montgomery said the only plans for alteration of the chimney were those drafted by Kugel's assistant and that these plans provided for reconstruction of the flue lining in a manner which, it has developed at the inquest, is illegal.

He emphasized that the drawing was viewed by Col. Oehmann's chief assistant before the permit was granted.

Contractor Kept Plan

To do the work, Montgomery said, he called on Alonzo Neil, a brick mason who had done satisfactory work in the past for the Smithy company and several other builders and agents, according to the witness. On August 15, 1937, he reported for duty and the chimney enlargement job was finished in five days.

W. D. Griffith, of a Philadelphia contracting firm, acted as overseer of Neil's work, said the witness, though the bricklayer received his pay from the Smithy company, on a voucher written by Griffith.

The Philadelphia contractor, who is reported to have died last year, remained in possession of the crude plan drafted at the District Building, said Montgomery, adding that at no time was he ever informed that the type of alteration performed was improper.

"When it was all done we thought it was one of the best looking jobs we'd ever had," he declared.

Neil, who lives at 2711 Georgia avenue, told the coroner's jury he has had 25 years experience as a brick mason, during which time he has worked on several chimneys, "some of them even larger than this one."

Manager is Questioned

In enlarging the stack's capacity by building an addition to it which practically doubled the perimeter, Neil said the only plans he worked from were those held by Griffith. Questioning brought out an admission by him that this was his first chimney job in which he was directed to fasten new and old lining tiles together in the fashion which has been held contrary to building regulations.

"I thought the apartment house was very safe," Mrs. Ella H. Shade, resident manager, told the jury, "with its four stairways and concrete floors and all."

But the stairways, said witness who preceded her, were fire hazards in themselves.

Open stair wells are susceptible to drafts in case of fire, testified Thomas F. Roche, a District building inspector, adding that those in the White Court were within the law.

His report was negative, he said, because the building's four inside stairways—hazards though they were in his estimation—were deemed adequate and in conformity with existing laws and regulations.

Of the chimney remodeling job he said, "that was bad construction."

Other witnesses yesterday were Harold A. Kemp, Ellwood Johnson and Henry G. Wilson, all District government engineers; Jesse J. Kimball, chief field building inspector in Col. Oehmann's office, and Percival B. Grant, 81-year-old retired building inspector.

Kemp, Johnson and Wilson were heard on the possible effect which blasting on the Rock Creek sewer diversion project nearby may have had on the apartment house chimney, all agreeing any influence was unlikely.

Flash From Tidal Basin

Vanguard of 200,000 Week-End Visitors Views New Born Cherry Tree Blossoms

Delicate, faintly tinted Japanese cherry blossoms—the first to burst into bloom at the Tidal Basin

Washington's Japanese cherry blossoms made their bow along the Tidal Basin yesterday as a warm spring sun raised the temperature to 62 degrees.

The fresh pink-tinted buds speedily drew visitors, the vanguard of a throng of more than 200,000 out-of-towners expected in the Capital this week-end.

Members of the committee planning the Cherry Blossom Festival had the Weather Bureau's assurance there will be no rain Friday—when Miss Rose Colliflower will be crowned Cherry Blossom Queen at 7:50 p. m.

The forecast for today is cloudy and warmer with showers tonight. The low temperature yesterday was 40 at 6 a. m.

For tomorrow the forecast is cloudy and colder with no rain.

Pre-festival signs already in evidence are the hundreds of posters all over the city directing visitors to the Tidal Basin; the confident prediction of Curtis Hodges, promotion director of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade, that there would be 200,000 blossom-time visitors,

Church Editors Oppose Film Block-Booking

Conference to Hear Discussion Today On Un-Americanism

A resolution favoring passage of the Neely Bill, which would abolish compulsory block booking and blind selling of films, was adopted at last night's session of the Associated Church Press Conference.

Meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel, the editors of Protestant religious publications also heard Representative Caroline O'Day (Democrat), of New York, outline the purpose of her pending bill, which she said would bring a million lay workers in nonprofit and charitable organizations under social security. Russell W. Davenport, chairman of the board of editors of Fortune, also spoke.

Yesterday morning, following their annual custom when in session here, the editors called on several Government leaders for off-the-record exchanges of thought. They were Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring; Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska. They will visit President Roosevelt at the White House this morning.

Leading the delegation were Dr. Guy Emery Shipler, editor of The Churchman, Episcopal publication, and president of the Associated Church Press; J. Edward Moseley, of the Christian Methodist, Disciples of Christ publication, St. Louis, Mo., vice president, and Dr. Richard W. Shipley, editor of the Methodist Protestant Recorder.

Delegates, attending a luncheon earlier in the day at the Universalist National Memorial Church, were addressed by Abram F. Myers, representing the Independent Exhibitors Organization; Henry Atkinson, of the Massachusetts Civic Federation, and Mrs. Mary Bannerman, local worker in the Motion Picture Research Council.

A round-table discussion this morning on un-American activities will be led by Leo Schwarz, of the Equality Magazine, New York City; Dr. L. M. Birkhead, secretary of the Friends of Democracy, and Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, member of the Dies Committee.

MARY IRVING CORBETT, of Georgetown Visitation Convent, will be a princess in the court of the queen of the 1940 Cherry Blossom Festival opening tomorrow at 4 p. m.

Knowing Right People Makes Census Easy

G. U. Student Acts As Chinese Interpreter For Enumerator

Uncle Sam's most honorable census taker went to Washington's Chinatown, near Sixth and H streets northwest, yesterday and found, as Confucius say, that if you know the right people you get most celestial welcome.

It was no trouble at all for Enumerator John E. Pluchino, 16355 R street northwest, to penetrate the dark hallways of the local outpost of the dragon republic. His way was smoothed by an interpreter, ambassador extraordinary and envoy plenipotentiary in the person of Philip Y. Lee, Arlington, Va., Georgetown University graduate, who says he is known to nearly every son of China in the Eastern United States.

It was Brady William Bishop, 904 Tenth street, a census supervisor, who had the foresight to send Chinese-speaking Philip Lee along with Pluchino, who speaks Italian and English.

Lee is secretary of a Chinese Masonic Order and has been president of it in other cities. He has acted for years as an intermediary between his people and United States Government officials.

Thus when the team of Lee and Pluchino descended on Chinatown yesterday all doors were opened. Oriental fears were set at rest, for it is an old Chinese custom back in the land of the dragon to take a census for tax collection purposes.

Lee and Pluchino threaded their way through Washington's Chinese section, past shops bearing names such as: "Ge How Oak Tin Association," "High Wah & Co." "Joy Inn," and "Sun Sang Yuen Co."

They rested their big census return sheets on glass cases containing such exotic goods as jade elephants, coils of punk, brocaded slippers, porcelain tea jars, tear vases and ornate teakwood carvings.

In one shop a portrait of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek stared down on the representatives of the sixteenth decennial census.

Garnett R. Brown, District census supervisor, said yesterday that the census was going along "without a hitch" and "about as quickly as we expected." He would not predict when it would be completed.

Brown Urges 9 p.m. Liquor Shop Closing

Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Told Work Of District Police Would Be Lessened

Closing local liquor stores at 9 p. m. would lessen the job of Washington's police, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, last night told members of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

The Capital policeman's work is also made difficult at present because of the city's rapid population growth, Maj. Brown asserted at the meeting in the Woodbridge branch of the Public Library, 2206 Rhode Island avenue northeast. He pointed out that the population of Washington has expanded 40 per cent in the last 10 years, while the police force has been increased only 4 per cent in that time.

The superintendent urged an increase of 100 men on the police force, but he declared that "armed hold-ups can be stopped only by an adequate punishment for the crime."

The group adopted a resolution favoring an increase of 100 men in the police force. Opposition to horse racing in the District was expressed in another resolution. The association went on record favoring the Nichols tax bill if the Randolph bill fails.

Capt. Sidney Marks of the Twelfth Precinct, spoke on the work of the Police Boys Club.

North Randle

Designated areas would be set aside for junk yards and automobile wrecking establishments under terms of a resolution adopted last night by the North Randle Community Citizens Association, meeting at the portable school, Minnesota avenue and E street southeast. The resolution was directed to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Another resolution requested the commission to erect shelters in Fort Dupont Park. The association voted to continue its fight for a new grade school and kindergarten in its area and will take up the matter again with the Board of Education and the District Commissioners.

It was voted to ask the Public Utilities Commission and the Capital Transit Co. to establish bus service on Ridge road between Anacostia road and Alabama avenue southeast. The group went on record to ask the Commissioners to remove obstructing earth embankments at M street, Massachusetts avenue and Twenty-seventh street southeast; for more policemen in the Eleventh Precinct and to protest failure to pave Minnesota avenue around Randle Circle.

Michigan Park

The Michigan Park Citizens Association had one of the largest turnouts in its history last night. More than 70 members turned out—and stayed out.

Arriving at the Bunker Hill School at 8 o'clock, members found the building locked. They waited, then telephoned the custodian without success. After an hour, the association held an impromptu meeting on the sidewalk.

It voted to adjourn.

2 Gunmen Take $20 From Manager Of Gas Station

Two armed robbers last night took $20 from Herbert King, night manager of a gas station at Twentieth street and New York avenue northwest. Three colored bandit suspects, captured after a liquor store holdup at 4824 Deane avenue northwest, Monday night, will appear in a police lineup before nearly 75 recent holdup victims tonight. Having confessed to robbing the store in which Herman Sirkis, 42, of Baltimore, was slain February 26, the bandits yesterday signed confessions in two other holdups, police said.

Examination of a gun taken from the three men cleared them of any complicity in the Sirkis murder, Capt. Ira E. Keck said.

Leader Offers To Settle Dispute Of A. F. L. Unions

A peace gesture highlighted the second day's meeting of the International Union of Operating Engineers, convening at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday, when Daniel W. Tracy, president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Engineers, agreed to settle a long standing jurisdictional dispute between the two A. F. of L. affiliates.

Tracy initiated the peace move during the course of a talk before the 800 convention delegates when he turned to John Possehl, president of the operating engineers' group and said:

"I'm sure we can iron out our differences."

Another speaker, George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L., attacked the National Labor Relations Board, which he charged was attempting to destroy craft unions.

'Modern' Chinese Girl Sues In-Laws for Breaking Up Home

$100,000 Damages Asked on Ground They Ousted Her

Pretty, 23-year-old Mrs. Mildred Lew, Baltimore, charged in District Court yesterday that her elderly Washington "in-laws" broke up her marriage because she was "too modern" for their traditional notions of decorum for Chinese brides.

Mrs. Lew asked a jury in the court of Justice Jesse C. Adkins for $100,000 damages from the in-laws, Charles Lew Wah and his wife, Lew She Wah, 606 Fifth street northwest.

Mrs. Lew's attire was as modern as her manner. She wore a smart black frock with high neck, high-heeled patent leather pumps and a flat black straw hat with white brim. Her lawyer was Mrs. Helen Sherry Rhoade.

Mrs. Lew, who went to grade and high schools in Baltimore, testified she married Norman Lew, 25, McKinley High School graduate, June 6, 1937, with the full consent of his parents. In fact, she declared, they paid a $300 fee to a Washington marriage agent for arranging the nuptials.

However, said Mrs. Lew, trouble began as soon as she moved to her in-laws' home and she was admonished for her modern, American demeanor. Her in-laws, she said, complained that she did not show them the proper respect. After 17 days, she said, they put her out.

D. C. $2,000,000 Short of Goal In Income Tax

With five days remaining to file a District income tax return, the District is still more than $2,000,000 short of its goal. The deadline for the tax, for both individuals and corporations, is midnight, April 15.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent said income tax collections yesterday totalled $63,373 raising the amount collected to date to $896,595. The anticipated revenue is $3,200,000. Although taxpayers may make their payments in two installments, most of them are paying the bill in full, Dent said.

Collector of Tax Chatham Towers revealed yesterday the District enjoyed the best collection month in history in March when local residents paid $8,626,729.63 for various taxes.

On the last day of March, which is not counted in the total, since the deposit is made the next day with the United States Treasury, the collections amounted to $1,430,904, one of the largest collections in history.

High School Cadets to Compete In Drill Today

Cadet regiments from six high schools will march this afternoon in the first competition under the new drill regulations of the U. S. Army.

In Central High School Stadium at 2 p. m., the regiments will drill, while their bands also are judged for their playing. The regiments are from Central, McKinley, Eastern, Western, Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson high schools.

Col. Wallace M. Craigie, professor of military science and tactics for cadets in divisions 1-9 in District schools, announced that a gold medal will go to the lieutenant colonel of the winning regiment; a silver cup and a silk flag to the regiment. The cadet captain of the winning band will receive a gold medal, with a silver cup to the band and ribbons to its members. The awards will be presented at a later date.

Son of Republican Committeeman Kills Self Here

Lucas E. Howard, 25, colored, son of Republican National Committeeman from Mississippi, Perry W. Howard, committeed suicide last night at the home, where he lived with his parents, 1829 S street northwest. Death came from a shotgun wound in the back of the head, police said.

His parents were seated downstairs when they heard the shot. They found him on the floor of his bedroom. He had been in ill health, it was reported. Formerly a clerk in the Census Bureau, he had been unemployed for the last two years.

His father has been a national committeeman since 1924. Howard was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital, and a certificate of suicide issued.

Allen Clearing Desk

Commissioner Allen last night began cleaning out his desk in the District Building which he has occupied off and on for the last seven years. He leaves the District Government next Monday.

"There's many a good idea filed away on paper I found while cleaning out," Allen said.

U. S. Workers Oppose War, Says Quill

But They'll Fight If Nation Is Invaded, Industrial Union Rally Is Told

"Members of the C. I. O. and American workers in general will fight if the country is invaded, but will oppose any effort to drag the United States into war," Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.), declared last night at a Washington Industrial Union Council rally of more than 1,000 persons in Central High School auditorium.

Quill cited the cost of lives, health and money of the last war in which the United States took part. He made a plea for unity of all races, colors and creeds in the labor movement.

Representative Frank Fries (Democrat), of Illinois, who also addressed the meeting, condemned amendments to the National Labor Relations Act proposed by the House Labor Committee and the special Smith committee. The audience seconded Representative Fries' speech by adopting a resolution opposing amendments to the act.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-D. C. Industrial Union Council, outlined a program of legislation for the District which has the backing of the council. He placed special emphasis on liberalizing the District unemployment compensation law and on expanding the low-cost housing program of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Other speakers were Joseph J. Jones, president of the Maryland-District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, and Charles Houston, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Cecil Owen, publicity chairman of Labor's Nonpartisan League, introduced the speakers.

The meeting was interrupted by a demonstration of support for members of the United Cafeteria employes (C. I. O.), who are on strike at the National Press Cafeteria.

Heating Engineers Nominate Spurney For President

Felix E. Spurney, of Kensington, Md., building manager of the Federal Reserve Building, last night was nominated for president of the local chapter of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers.

Others nominated were:

Frederick A. Leser, for vice president; Edmund H. Lloyd, secretary; William H. Littleford, treasurer. Nominated to the board of governors were: Thomas H. Urdahl, Marcel F. Hoppe and Maurice T. Firestone.

The group heard William H. Driscoll, of New York, air conditioning executive, describe technical advances in air conditioning.

Win Places in Talented Children's Art Classes

Josephine Masson, 16-year-old Eliot Junior High School student, and William Beach, 13, of Langley Junior High School, were among winners of a contest conducted in Washington schools to discover children with aptitude in art. They were awarded places in the District WPA's talented children's art classes at the Children's Gallery, 816 Independence ave.

'Plug Loophole' In Civil Service, Inquiry Asked

'Termination' Clause Asked to Force Exams Of Those Blanketed In

An amendment to the Ramspeck bill, to close a loophole through which, witnesses said, Government employes and their bosses could escape merit system extension, was asked yesterday in a hearing before the Senate Civil Service Committee.

H. Eliot Kaplan, secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League, told the committee that the present language of the bill left the way open for the heads of Government agencies to bar employes from obtaining Civil Service status under the proposed extension, and for employes themselves to duck examination without losing their jobs.

Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming agreed that the bill should be clarified while pointing out that the commission's staff had not made the same interpretation.

Change Urged

The present measure sets out three stages in the proposed move to blanket employes in the Civil Service: The President would first order positions now outside the Civil Service to be "covered in." Department heads could then certify holders of these positions for civil service status. The job holders finally would take a non-competitive examination to get civil service status.

Kaplan urged that the bill be changed to make sure that the second step would be taken, and he suggested a "termination" clause to prohibit employes from continuing indefinitely in recently-covered civil service jobs without taking an examination.

Several witnesses centered their attack on the present Keller-Nicholos "rider" which would apply a State quota rule in the proposed merit extension.

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, said that the rider had been inspired by the thought that the quota system is not being enforced to the fullest possible extent. He explained that the World War had been largely responsible for putting some States far above their quotas. Candidates from States under their quotas, he said, are given preference in Civil Service ratings as part of the effort to bring the quotas into line.

Riders Called "Unfair"

Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, commission member, said that the Keller-Nichols amendment would make the Ramspeck bill "impossible" to administer. She said it was "quite possible" that not enough candidates from States in arrears would be available, and that several examinations would be needed to fill vacant jobs.

Luther Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, said the rider would be "unfair" to Government employes. Steward and Mitchell said they were opposed to another provision in the bill which would bar employes connected with the WPA from coming into the civil service.

"Congress holds the purse strings," said Steward, "and there is no danger of fastening on the pay roll a large number of Federal employes for which there is no need." If Congress cut out the WPA, he said, its employes would go, too.

McDonough Asks Omission

Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York suggested that temporary census workers, now banned from permanent civil service status, should be given an opportunity to get it, through amendment to the bill.

Joseph McDonough, legislative representative, of the A. F. L. Electrical Workers Union, asked that mechanical workers employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority be left out of the civil service extension plan, declaring they would prefer to continue with collective bargaining.

Chairman Bulow, of the Senate committee, said the hearings will continue Friday. Several members of Congress, including Representatives Ramspeck, Keller and Nichols and officials of the WPA and PWA, have been invited to testify.

Mrs. Campbell, British Stage Star, Dies at 75

MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL

By the Associated Press

London, April 10.—The death of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, 75, noted actress of the stage and screen, at Pau, France, was announced today.

The British-born actress, who was famed as a wit as well as an actress, made her professional debut in 1888, launching a career which carried her around the world in some of the theater's greatest roles.

She toured the United States several times and in 1934 went to Hollywood where she made several movies.

In her most popular repertory in this country—Sudermann's play "Magda," Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" and a play called "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith," she was the first touring star after Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry to get a $3 top admission.

In those days she was the fashion plate of actresses. Women rushed to her shows to see the styles she brought from Paris.

She was a close friend of G. B. Shaw, and created the role of the flower girl in "Pygmalion." She won her first fame playing Paula in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" in 1893.

She is survived by a daughter, who married an American and went to Chicago to live. Her son was killed in the World War.

Stockholder Asks Girdler About Labor

C. I. O. Share Owner Votes Against Him At Annual Meeting

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., April 10.—A demure, soft-spoken C. I. O. stockholder quizzed Chairman T. M. Girdler of the Republic Steel Corporation today about the company's attitude toward organized labor.

In the midst of the annual stockholders' meeting, at which Girdler spoke of the United States Supreme Court's refusal to review the National Labor Relations Board's order directing Republic to reinstate 5,000 employes who participated in the 1937 "Little Steel" strike, Miss Anna Bliss McConnell, of New York City, spoke up.

"Has this corporation changed its attitude toward organized labor in the past few years?" she asked.

"Not Against Unions"

"This corporation is not opposed to organized labor and never has been," Girdler replied.

"There are quite a few people in the county under a different impression," Miss McConnell shot back.

"That's unfortunate," said the Republic chairman, to which Miss McConnell observed, "Where there is smoke there must be fire."

Miss McConnell, good-looking, of small build, in her late 20's and smartly dressed in a blue suit, said she was a member of the C. I. O., but not of the Steel Workers Union.

She asked Girdler if he would say Republic was friendly toward organized labor.

"The corporation is friendly toward all labor," he said.

Miss McConnell said her question was directed toward "organized labor."

"Yes, organized labor," Girdler replied.

When the votes for directors showed all 15 had been elected by the same vote, with the exception of Girdler, who received 10 less than the others, the Republic chairman remarked Miss McConnell must have cast her shares against him.

Backpay Minimized

Girdler told the stockholders it would not cost the corporation anything like the $5,000,000 reported to reinstate the 5,000 C. I. O. strikers and reimburse them with back pay as the National Labor Relations Board directed.

"Many of the strikers had already returned to work at the time the Labor Board's order was issued, and by far the greater number of those who filed applications for reinstatement have returned to work."

Dies Demands Communists Reveal Facts

Earl Browder Gave False Membership Report, House Told

A "high functionary" of the Communist Party was quoted yesterday by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, as saying there are 125,000 dues-paying members "in the State of Pennsylvania alone."

Declaring that "for obvious reasons" he was unable to disclose the name of his informant, Dies said the information was "reliable," but he added a moment later:

"I do not say that (figure of 125,000) is correct, but I merely say that here is a party in the United States that refuses to give to the Congress vital information."

Earl Browder, Communist leader, told the Dies Committee "a deliberate falsehood" in claiming only 100,000 members for the Nation as a whole, said Dies. He declared that from membership books recently seized in Philadelphia "we know that it exceeds 118,000."

Communists Go to Mexico

Dies told the House that "we know that in recent months the Republic of Mexico has permitted thousands of Communists from Spain and France to settle there. I have been receiving word almost every week that there are as many as 10,000 Communists from Spain and France in that country."

"So the question presents itself to man government, can the Soviet all of us," he said, "can the Ger- Union invade the Western Hemisphere in that manner or under that guise?"

Referring to the persistent refusal of Communist witnesses in the last few days to reveal the names of their party associates, Dies declared that "the question must be determined by this House as to whether or not organizations who owe their allegiance to a foreign government and to a foreign dictators have a constitutional right to say to an agency of this House: 'We refuse to tell you who we are, where we are working and where we are working and where our activities are.'"

Denouncing the Communist Party as "a foreign conspiracy," Dies declared that "if a democracy cannot devise some legislative way to protect itself against undemocratic minorities, then indeed we are in grave peril." He mentioned examples Czcho-Slovakia and Poland.

May Appeal to Court

Dies asserted that the committee would carry to the Supreme Court its demand that the Communists be required to reveal the information they have hitherto concealed. Five have already been cited by the House for contempt for refusal to answer questions.

If the courts rule against the committee, said the chairman, "something will have to be done." He declared that a bill will soon be presented to Congress "that will require organizations like the Communist Party and these pro-fascist organizations that believe in military dictatorship and have so admitted through their leaders, to register and to give the names of their officers, their directors, their receipts and their disbursements."

Three contempt cases were presented to the District grand jury yesterday by District Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant District Attorney John W. Fihelly, chief of the civil division. Dies spent about 10 minutes in the grand jury room.

The individuals accused were Dr. Albert Blumberg, of Baltimore, and Thomas P. F. O'Dea and Philip Frankfeld, of Boston.

Budget Bureau Approves Plan For Schools

To Pass $7,899,000 Building Program On to Congress

The Federal Budget Bureau yesterday approved the District Commissioners plan to request authority of Congress for a five-year school building program as recommended last month by a special committee headed by Capt. John L. Person, Assistant Engineer Commissioner.

Replacement of 34 old buildings, some dating from the Civil War period, by 14 modern elementary schools, is recommended in the program which would cost about $7,899,000.

John B. Blandford, jr., Assistant Director of the Budget Bureau, said in his letter to the Commissioners, "this advice would involve no commitment with respect to individual items in such a program or to the submission of estimates of appropriations therefor."

Although the Person report covered only the old elementary school buildings, the commissioners plan is to seek authorization for a five-year program covering all of the District's needs.

That large body reposing in the rear of the eight ball is the National Boxing Association, hereinafter to be known for space-saving purposes as the N. B. A.

POVICH

Somewhere between 1759 and 1796 the late great poet Robert Burns was moved to observe that "The best laid schemes o' mice and men gang aft a-gley." It sounds suspiciously as if the old Scotchman must have anticipated the N. B. A. and its present plight.

The N. B. A. could qualify for Burns' crack on both counts—mice and men. At various intervals in the current featherweight title muddle, the N. B. A. has beat lustily upon its chest and proclaimed a new order and at other times it has caviled and retreated with mouse-like timidity.

All of the N. B. A.'s plans to set up a new featherweight dynasty have certainly gone haywire. The N. B. A. has failed even to retain the gains it made in the only weight division of the prize fight industry in which it had been powerful. Champion Joey Archibald is flouting N. B. A. authority and getting away with it, all because the N. B. A. forgot it was toothless and attempted to get tough.

When the N. B. A. declared the featherweight title vacant a couple of weeks ago because of Archibald's refusal to fight Pete Scalzo, the N. B. A. pet, it was supposed to be the N. B. A.'s trump card. Archibald over-trumped it with the help of parties in the N. B. A.'s own camp. He signed to fight Harry Jeffra in Baltimore, an N. B. A. State, with full permission of the Maryland Boxing Commission.

Presented with a chance to stage a title bout, the Maryland Commission received the N. B. A. protest by telling the N. B. A. to take a running jump in the lake. Maryland was withdrawing from the N. B. A. Seemingly a title fight within its borders was more desirable than N. B. A. affiliation. Maryland stated simply that it didn't want to be dictated to, if you'll pardon us for almost ending a sentence with a preposition.

That was a blow in the head to the N. B. A.'s deep-laid plans to retain sway over the featherweight division which it had painstakingly nurtured through the years. Somehow, the N. B. A. was always a power in featherweight circles. Mike Jacobs could control the heavyweights, the light-heavies, most of the middleweight bouts, and the welters and lightweights, but the N. B. A. hung zealously to its power over the feathers.

The champion who finally flouted 'em, Joey Archibald, was of their own creation. They promoted Archibald up the ratings ladder until he got a shot at Mike Belloise, the New York champion, and won the title. The N. B. A. was proud of Archibald, its own champ. He was something to fling into the teeth of N. B. A. detractors. And now they've lost Archibald.

The N. B. A. lost him because it couldn't keep its own members in line. Maryland gave Archibald an out. Paradoxically, the man Archibald is fighting, without N. B. A. sanction, is another N. B. A. protege, Harry Jeffra. Like the Maryland Commission, Jeffra is leaping at the chance to figure in a title fight, and to heck with the N. B. A.

It all began, of course, with last September's Archibald-Jeffra fight at Griffith Stadium. The N. B. A. was holding its convention here and President-to-be Heinie Miller wanted to delight the visiting delegates with a first-class fight show. Archibald was an N. B. A. champion. He would be one party to the fight. Pete Scalzo, who knocked out Archibald in an overweight match previously, would be the ideal party of the second part. But the N. B. A. couldn't match that pair. Archibald's canny manager, Al Weil, wanted none of Scalzo.

And then the N. B. A., instead of sticking to its guns and demanding that Archibald fight Scalzo, vacillated. Because it didn't want to lose Archibald, the N. B. A. dug up an opponent to his liking. It unearthed the spavined Harry Jeffra, an aging former bantamweight in the hopes of suiting Archibald, and it did. The N. B. A. gave Scalzo the go-by.

When Jeffra confounded everybody by licking Archibald, though failing to get the decision, the N. B. A. authorities here stood up on hind legs in righteous indignation and demanded a return match between the pair before Archibald could defend his title against a third party. Scalzo was completely forgotten.

But the N. B. A.'s demand for another Archibald-Jeffra fight was only temporary. It suffered a change of heart. Scalzo was going along beating Simon Chavez and other contenders, and the N. B. A. was literally forced to recognize him as the No. 1 challenger. Then the N. B. A. began to beat its breast and demand a Scalzo-Archibald bout.

The weapon the N. B. A. was using was the threat of vacating Archibald's title unless he agreed to the match. A heck of a lot Archibald cared for that, seemingly. He signed to meet Jeffra in a renegade N. B. A. State, and thus the Archibald-Jeffra match for which the N. B. A. had originally plumped is being staged outside the N. B. A. jurisdiction. The N. B. A. says the title is vacant and that the winner of a Scalzo-Jimmy Perrin bout will be the new featherweight champion, and past experience answers "wanna bet?"

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 10.—American soil has not been wetted down with the blood of soldiers for 75 years. Today, a sick, reeling world staggers on to self-annihilation, but we, sitting between our Atlantic and Pacific moats, have not heard a gun nor the cry of a war-wounded man for three long generations. We're one of the last lights of democracy shining out into the gathering gloom.

CONSIDINE

It has been just about 75 years since we became a sports-minded Nation. Civil War soldiers, returning from the last of our wars, spread the doctrine of baseball all over the country. Ten or 15 years after that, football began to get its foothold. Tennis and golf came along in the '80's, and by the turn of the century our vast playground system was under way.

It must be more than coincidence.

Twice since the Civil War this country has sent its men away to fight. And they were winners of only heartaches and headaches. After each expedition the country returned with redoubled vigor to sports, to kill the stench of war and spend those forces which—if unspent—might lead men to other wars.

Germany never knew sport as we know it. Russia's idea of sport is 20,000 gymnasts doing full kneebends in a dread unison that is no different than the rhythmic march of military boots. Athletics are comparatively new to Japan. The children's toys in England and France this Christmas were miniature bombers and lead soldiers.

Our kids this Christmas got their usual bats and balls, football suits and skis, boxing gloves and bicycles. We ran for medals, not from bombs. We skied for fun, not to kill.

Our kind of bombardment was symbolized the day in Cincinnati when Charley Keller, Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey hit four home runs to down the Reds.

Sports have taught Americans to be fair, tolerant and appreciative of a Maker who, in his wisdom, sees fit to give to the Ruths, the Cobbs, the Granges, the Dempseys, the Jones and the Tildens those little extra somethings that make us idolize them. Who is there to say that we have not become a greater Nation because of sport, and the lessons sport has to offer for the fan as well as the man on the field of play?

Turner Releases Pete Scalzo From Contract to Fight Here

Knocked out of a chance to stage a world's featherweight championship match for the second time, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday released Petey Scalzo, National Boxing Association's No. 1 contender, from a contract to fight here in order to help unscramble the muddled situation in the 126-pound division.

Scalzo was released from his Washington contract to head off a threat from New Orleans, to declare Jimmy Perrin world's champion and stage its own title bout.

The New York featherweight immediately signed to meet Perrin in New Orleans May 6, in accordance with an N. B. A. stipulation that the winner of such a bout will be recognized as champion.

Pete Reilly, however, insisted that Perrin must post a $2,500 guarantee that he will fight Scalzo again in Washington 30 days after the New Orleans fight, win, lose or draw. If Perrin refuses to post the guarantee, Reilly insists on a 33 1-3 per cent cut of the gate.

2,500 Watch Jannazzo Win At Riverside

Gets Split Decision Over Mamakos; Fights 8 Rounds With Broken Hand

By Al Hailey

Professional boxing in Washington was given a big boost last night as Izzy Jannazzo, fourth-ranking welterweight, slashed his way to a ten-round majority decision over Washington's Steve Mamakos in Riverside Stadium's inaugural fight show. The New York Italian fought eight rounds with a broken hand.

The New York Italian gave Mamakos, tenth-ranking contender for the 147-pound championship, a thorough beating before one of the largest houses of the indoor season in several years.

It was a bitter price Jannazzo paid for his victory. He broke his right hand in the second round when he landed a terrific blow high on Mamakos' head.

While Mamakos sat in a corner, his face badly swollen and bruised from Jannazzo's constant jabbing, the New Yorker and his manager, Guy Anselmi, were near tears in the dressing room. The broken hand will practically eliminate the veteran Jannazzo from a championship fight with Henry Armstrong in the near future.

Although S. G. Leoffler, owner of Riverside, appeared somewhat discouraged by the 2,500 turnout, he did not lose any money on the fight. Matchmaker Jimmy Erwin revealed that the gate was $2,039—more than the competing fight enterprise, Turner's arena, has grossed in years.

Mamakos made a charging fight of it throughout the 10 rounds, but the split decision was hardly understandable.

In some strange manner, Dr. O. U. Singer, one of the judges, gave the decision to Mamakos on points, 89 to 88. The other judge, James Sullivan, gave it to Jannazzo, 96-85, and Referee Harry Volkman gave the nod to the New Yorker, also, 92-87.

Ringside poinion, however, gave Jannazzo the fight by the wide margin. On The Post score sheet, Mamakos won one round—the sec-

Medalist Wins 1st Mason Dixon Match

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 10 (AP).—Medalist Al Dollins of Covington, Va., took the first round of his bid for a second successive Mason and Dixon golf championship by eliminating Francis Oakes of Brookline, Mass., today 7 to 5.

Maryland U. Track Team Routs V. M. I.

No records fell, but Maryland University took credit for its second outdoor track triumph of the season yesterday when it defeated Virginia Military Institute, 78 1-3 to 47 2-3, on a rain-soaked College Park oval.

After the first event, the mile run which Mason Chronister won by almost half a lap, the nimble-toed Terps were never behind, gradually increasing their lead as the meet wore on. They won nine of the 14 events, took nine seconds and five thirds.

Murphy Out of Meet

Minus their Southern Conference 100 and 220-yard dash champion, Joe Murphy, whose recent illness forced him out, the Terps necessarily made rather costly shifts in the line-up, but the victory was convincing enough, anyway. In their opening effort on an out-of-doors track last Saturday, they trampled the other Virginia alphabetical school, V. P. I., by almost the same margin.

Alan Miller, ace quarter-miler, was moved to the dashes to fill the vacancy left by Murphy, but the best he could manage for was second

Dolly Val Pays $115.10 As $10,000 Race Victor

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., April 10.—James Emery's Dolly Val, a 57-to-1 shot, provided a surprise finish to the richest racing season since pari-mutuel wagering was legalized in Florida by thundering to victory in the $10,000 added Tropical Handicap today.

The big, brunette mare, whose chances of winning were considered so slight that she was made the longest-priced horse in the race, charged to the front in the backstretch and won by a half-length.

Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip was second; Mrs. E. L. Martin's Supreme Sir, third.

The outcome was a disappointment to the crowd of 10,000 that jammed Tropical Park for the getaway day feature, for it had made Leo J. Marks' Many Stings, winner of the $50,000 Widener Cup and the $10,000 McLennan Memorial, a 1-to-2 favorite. Many Stings, winner of his last six starts, broke last in the field of nine and finished a poor seventh.

Bull Whip stayed with the pacesetters in the early stages of the race and moved ahead with Dolly Val. Supreme Sir came up from sixth to finish in the money, two lengths in front of Mrs. M. Evans' Shot Put.

A $2 win ticket on Dolly Val was worth $115.10. She paid $42.30 place, $17.30 show. Bull Whip returned $8.10 place, $7.10 show, and Supreme Sir $6.90 show.

Leonard Faces Bees Today as Opener Tune-up

Dutch Leonard will bring out his knuckle ball for a final tune-up today before taking the mound in Monday's 1940 inagural game against the Boston Red Sox.

Manager Bucky Harris today is sending the portly right-hander against the Boston Bees. No definite assignment has been given Leonard. There is a probability that he may pitch the entire nine innings, although Harris is leavi g his length of duty to the discretion of the knuckle baller.

Against the Bees, whom they have beaten four times in four engagements this Spring, the Nats will be seeking their eighth-straight exhibition game victory.

Dizzy Dean Fined $100—Quits Again

By International News Service

Topeka, Kans., April 10.—The expensive Dizzy Dean with the questionmark arm announced in righteous indignation tonight that he had quit the Chicago Cubs as the result of a $100 fine plastered on him by Manager Gabby Hartnett.

"That's all right with me," said Gabby, "the fine still goes. I don't want to be in the position of picking on one fellow, but I'm fed up with his antics. He had been warned often enough."

The fine was imposed because Dizzy disregarded the midnight curfew hour last night, but the trouble really goes back to an episode in San Antonio several days ago, when the $185,000 pitcher was quoted as saying no one was going to tell him when to go to bed.

He emphasized his defiance of the club rules by staying up until 4 o'clock in the morning. In announcing the fine today, Hartnett said Dean was the only member of the club who had shown unwillingness to go along with the rules.

Diz said he was returning at once to Chicago where he might play some semipro baseball and remain a "hold-out" until the fine had been remitted.

Outhit, Locals Are Helped by Nine Walks

Boston Rally in 9th Fizzles Out; Walker Gets Three of Six Washington Hits

By Shirley Povich.

Their seventh straight exhibition game victory befell the Nats yesterday. They were outhit, 10 to 6, by the Boston Bees, but won the ball game, 4 to 3, with the help of nine bases on balls issued by a generous Boston pitcher named Bill Posedel.

For Gerry Walker and Jimmy Pofahl, new members of the Nats, it was a smashing introduction to Washington fans, however. The veteran outfielder from the White Sox and the expensive rookie from Minneapolis, collected four of the Nats' hits, three by Walker.

As a scant 1,000 fans greeted the first 1940 appearance of the Washington club, the Nats provided an anemic batting exhibition for the first five innings against Posedel. Walker's single in the second inning was the Nats' only blow until the same citizen singled to open the sixth when the Nats tied the score with a three-run uprising, aided by a base on balls.

Big Joe Krakauskas qualified for a pitching job in the opening series with the Red Sox next week with a six-inning performance in which he held the Bees to three runs, two of which were distinctly unearned.

When Walker, with his third hit of the game, drove over the run that established the Nats in their 4-3 lead, Bucky Harris was entrusting the pitching duties to the Venezuelan Alex Carrasquel. He held the Bees to three hits in the last three innings and with two out in the ninth saw the tying run reach third base, where it languished.

Pofahl Error Costly

Pofahl was a party to the Bees three-run stampede against Krakauskas in the second inning. After Cuccinello had hit the center field wall with a two-bagger and Krakky had fanned Ross, Pofahl muffed a hard chance on Majeski's grounder, and was charged with an error. The first run crossed the plate when Miller beat out a hit to Travis, and after Krakky walked Posedel to fill the bases, a single produced two more runs.

That single was delivered by Bob Loane, the Bees' center fielder whom the Nats discharged last summer after a brief and dismal tryout.

The game rocked along at 3 to 0 until the sixth. Despite five bases on balls Posedel was yielding, the Nats were muffing scoring chances. Their second hit didn't occur until the sixth, and that was a luck-anointed affair.

Walker Hit Lucky

Walker was credited with the hit when his high fly to short center dropped in the midst of Second Baseman Cuccinello and a pair of Boston outfielders. With one out, Bloodworth walked and Pofahl then struck a blow by singling past third base to score Walker. Bloodworth, who reached third on the play, trotted home on Ferren's infield out, and Pinch Hitter Jake Early fetched Pofahl home from second with a single to right.

Posedel put the winning run on base when he walked Wasdell to start the seventh. Buddy Lewis and Walker delivered hard-hit singles to bring him home, but the Nats muffed a chance for a cluster of runs when Travis grounded into a double play with none as yet out.

Powell Hurt by Crash Into Fence as Yanks Beat Dodgers, 7-6

Champs Win Despite Only Two Hits

Dahlgren's Homer In 6th Is Decisive; Minors Beat Tigers; Hubbell Stops Tribe

By International News Service

Ashland, Ky., April 10.—Jake Powell, New York Yankee outfielder, tonight was ordered to remain in a hospital 24 hours after he was knocked unconscious when he crashed into a steel reenforced fence in pursuit of a fly ball today. Physicians said Powell was not hurt seriously.

The accident occurred in the seventh inning of an exhibition game which the Yankees won, 7 to 6, from the Brooklyn Dodgers, though the champions made only two hits.

Ernie Koy smashed a line drive into right center and, as Powell reached the fence of wooden construction with steel sheeting, the outfielder leaped high and the back of his head hit the fence. Powell, also hit by the ball as it caromed off the fence, collapsed. Koy got a homer as players rushed to Powell's aid.

The Yanks staged a six-run uprising in the fourth when Red Rolfe led off with a single, New York's first hit, and there followed two errors, a mental lapse that was scored as a fielder's choice, and five bases on balls by Pitcher Max Macon, three of them forcing in runs.

Babe Dahlgren homered in the sixth for the Yanks' other hit and what proved to be the winning run.

Evansville, Ind., April 10 (AP).—Three hurlers held the Detroit Tigers to four hits today as Evansville, Three-Eye League farm club of the Boston Bees, scored a 7-to-5 victory in an exhibition game here.

Trailing, 4 to 3, as the result of four errors, Evansville rallied in the sixth inning to score four runs. Paul (Dizzy) Trout and Archie McKain, the Tiger hurlers, yielded 14 blows.

A's Beat Chattanooga

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 10 (AP).—Two late scoring spurts gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 7-to-6 victory over the Chattanooga Lookouts in an exhibition baseball game here today.

Wally Moses' triple in the seventh produced two runs and Hal Wagner sewed up the game in the eighth with another three-base drive that scored the winning run. Moses and Sam Chapman did the heavy stick work for the A's, both sending two runs across. Moses had two hits, Chapman three.

Red Sox Down Reds

Charleston, W. Va., April 10 (AP).—Paul Derringer performed in mid-season fashion for the Cincinnati Reds today but the Boston Red Sox hit when it counted for a 2-1 victory.

Derringer hurled four-hit ball through six innings but permitted Dom Dimaggio to single and Ted Williams to double in the first frame for the initial tally. Gene Thompson took over in the seventh and immediately gave up two singles and a walk, returning the winning margin.

Bill Werber scored the Sox's lone run, on Ival Goodman's single in the fifth.

The Phils got off to a flying start with a five-run outburst in the first inning capped by Ben Warren's home run. Joe Marty and Morris Arnovich added the other round-trippers in the sixth.

Tarboro, N. C., April 10 (AP).—Carl Hubbell went nine innings today for the first time and pitched the New York Giants to a 4-to-1 triumph over the Cleveland Indians on four hits.

Pofahl is seen getting away a relay to first base which was a split-second too late for a double play. It happened in the fifth inning yesterday as the Nats beat the Bees, 4-3.

W.-L. Defeated By Roosevelt Nine, 5 to 4

Generals Lose First Game as Riders Triumph in 10th

A ringing triple off the bat of Ernie Travis, followed by a single by Howard, gave Roosevelt High a ten-inning 5-4 victory over Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, yesterday as the Riders opened their season on the home field.

It was the Little Generals' first loss in three games, and the two tenth-inning hits nullified a W. and L. rally in the ninth that tied the score and almost took the decision.

Going into the ninth, Washington-Lee was on the short end of a 4-to-2 count and Roosevelt appeared an easy victor. Then Payne, Good and Pinch-hitter McCann singled in succession for 1 run, and the tying tally came over after the catch of Owens' fly to the outfield.

While Roosevelt was slugging the pitching of four W.-L. hurlers for ten hits, five Rider moundsmen were limiting their foes to five safeties, all singles. Travis had a double and single in five times, in addition to his triple, to lead the winners' in hitting, while no W.-L. batsman was able to get more than a single hit.

Eagles Lose Opener On Home Diamond; Held to Three Hits

Giving all the help possible to the opposition, American University launched its baseball season yesterday with a 17-0 loss to Johns Hopkins on the A. U. diamond.

Five errors were turned in by the Eagles as their three mound choices, Nichelson, Etchinson and Byham, contributed 15 hits, 12 bases on balls and three hit batsmen to the Hopkins cause.

After the invaders scattered hits all over the field for six runs in the first inning there was never any doubt of the outcome. The Baltimoreans tallied twice more in the third, six in the fourth, once in the fifth and wound up the slaughter with a pair in the sixth.

Bethesda Bows To Wilson Nine

All told, Wilson pumped 19 hits to all parts of the diamond in recording its second victory of the year, the Presidents previously having disposed of Greorgetown Prep.

Its dazzling display of batting power served a formidable warning to Wilson's future interhigh foes and in Nino Briscuso the Presidents can show a pitcher capable of more than holding his own in championship competition.

Oddly enough, the winners were forced to obliterate an early 4-2 deficit to capture their second game. But once the Green aggregation began meeting the ball with heightened precision and timing, the Bethesdans were soon out of the running, as Wilson scored six runs in the third inning and steadily added to its lead.

G.W. Trounces Wilson, 13-2, For 3d Victory

Colonials Pile Up Score on Teachers In Weird Game

A 10-hit batting attack and a bit of cooperation from the other team gave George Washington University its third baseball victory of the season yesterday—a 13-2 rout of Wilson Teachers College on the Ellipse.

But don't let that score fool you—it was more the lack of the Teachers' ability to get organized than it was the power of the Colonial nine.

G. W. ran up four runs in the fifth inning with just one hit off the Owls' Pitcher Lou Ifshin, for instance. The Buff nine, George Washington's first in three years, drove Ifshin out of the box after that fifth-inning "splurge," however.

Coach G. Harris (Doc) White called Ernie Cole off third base to the mound, and the Colonials were able to get but three hits the remainder of the game.

The hitting of Second Baseman Lusby, who opened a three-run attack in the fourth inning with a screaming triple into leftfield, and Catcher Bob Nowaskey, who followed up with a two-base smash, brought smiles ot the face of Ed Morris, G. W. coach.

The Colonials pitching was hardly any cause for enthusiasm after Toby Bright earned a rest by holding the Owls to a scant two hits in his five-inning performance.

Lee Kushman took over at the opening of the sixth, allowed the Teachers two hits in the eighth and then turned over the mound duties to Joe Comer, who Morris proudly explained has "never pitched before for anybody anywhere."

Joe did all right, striking out Shortstop Laake, the first man up in the Owls' ninth-inning stand, and allowing two hits, both singles. Both men, "Flash" Gordon and Joe Rike, died on base, however.

in the 220 and third in the 100. Ken Barnes took the latter in 10.1 with a lunge that beat out V. M. I.'s Deaderick.

It was Deaderick who sparked the running events for the Cadets, taking high individual score of 13 points. He romped in first in the 220-yard dash and the low hurdles at the same distance, besides his second in the 100.

A surprise element was furnished by tow-headed Gene Ochsenreiter, son of the former Washington football star, who beat out his mate, Warfield and Morrison, of V. M. I., in the 440. A little later the fast-improving youngster put on the most brilliant burst of speed of the meet to steal second in the 880 from V. M. I.'s Rockwood, after the latter had paced him all the way. Jim Kehoe took his only first of the meet in the event.

ond. He boxed on even terms in the eighth, but the clever New Yorker literally made a monkey out of Washington's tenth-ranking Greek battler.

There were no knockdowns, but Jannazzo, shooting from long range, threw caution to the winds in the late stages and rocked Mamakos repeatedly.

After taking a beating in the early part of the eight-round semifinal, Sammy B. Magro, 148, Birmingham, Ala., came back with a slashing attack to the face and body to take a unanimous decision over Washington's El Brookman, 149.

In the four-round opener Manuel Roas, 148, of Baltimore, took everything Pedro Cisco, of Los Angeles, 149, had to offer and came on to win the decision.

Phillip Ensenga, 138½, took a four-round decision over Phil McKenna, 138. Both boys came from Baltimore—why, nobody knows.

Six Open Qualifying Points Are Eliminated by U. S. G. A.

4 Foreign Stars, Hogan Must Qualify

Foreign Players Not Exempted for First Time; Virginians To Play at Manor

By the Associated Press

New York, April 10.—Sectional qualifying rounds for the 1940 National Open Golf championship will be held at 26 points this year, compared with 32 in 1939, it was announced today by the United States Golf Association. The district eliminations, at 36 holes, will be held Monday, May 27.

It was felt that players in the six eliminated territories either could seek to qualify conveniently at other points, or would be unlikely to attend the championship proper, to be played at the Canterbury Golf Club, outside Cleveland, June 6-8.

The places eliminated are Huntington, W. Va.; Richmond, Va.; Atlanta, Memphis, New Orleans and Houston.

Manor Local Scene

(Players from Richmond and other points in Virginia will qualify with the Washington, D. C., and Maryland entries at Manor Club, Norbeck, Md. Outstanding players from the Old Dominion expected to compete include Chandler Harper, Rut Coffey and Errie Ball. Bobby Cruikshank, Richmond, is automatically eligible, having finished in the first 30 last year.)

Of the 170 places in the championship starting field, probably 138 will be allocated among the 26 districts according to the size and strength of their entry. The other 32 will go automatically to the 31 low scorers in last year's tournament, won by Byron Nelson at Philadelphia, and to the home pro at the Canterbury G. C., Waldo Crowder.

Among the outstanding players who will have to compete in the sectional tests are Ben Hogan, second-ranking player on the recently-completed winter tour, and four foreign stars—Jim Ferrier, Australian open and amateur champion the last two years; Martin Rose, Argentine open champion; Enrique Bertolino, Argentine P. G. A. titleholder, and Aurelio Castanon, former Argentine open champion.

Big Field in New York

Since all of them are expected to compete in the Metropolitan open championship May 24-26, it is likely they will seek their places in the United States open in the Metropolitan district qualifying round. This will be held at the Mount Vernon Country Club, Tuckahoe, N. Y.

In past years the U. S. G. A. had a policy of making foreign players automatically eligible for the championship. At last January's annual meeting, however, a new rule was passed leaving such action to the U. S. G. A.'s discretion. Since all of the players involved in this case will be in this country at the time of the qualifying tests, it was felt it would be unfair to the hundreds of domestic hopefuls to deprive them of any places when so few already are available.

The list of qualifying points:

Country Club of Birmingham, Ala.; Phoenix (Ariz.) C. C.; Flintridge C. C., Pasadena, Calif., and San Francisco G. C.; Denver (Colo.) C. C.; Manor C. C., Norbeck, Md.; Ponte Vedra C. C., Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.; Olympia Fields (Ill.) C. C.

Belmont C. C., Waverly, Mass.; Oakland Hills C. C., Birmingham, Mich.; the Country Club, Minneapolis, Minn.; Indian Hills C. C., Kansas City, Mo., and St. Louis C. C., Clayton, Mo.; Happy Hollow Club, Omaha, Nebr.

Schuyler Meadows Club, Loudonville, N. Y., Meadowbrook G. and C. C., Clarence, N. Y., and Mount Vernon C. C., Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Biltmore Forest C. C., Biltmore, N. C.; Hamilton County G. and C. C., Cincinnati, and Mayfield C. C., South Euclid, Ohio. (If another needed for Cleveland District, also Manakiki G. and C. C., Willoughby, Ohio); Oklahoma City (Okla.) G. and C. C.; Torresdale-Frankford C. C., Philadelphia, and Westmoreland C. C., Verona, Pa.; Colonial G. C., Fort Worth, Tex.; Fort Douglas Club, Salt Lake City, Utah; Tacoma (Wash.) C. and G. C.

White Feather Fights Bear Tonight on Mat

Ginger Reported Out Of Condition for Bout At Turner's Arena

Chief White Feather and Ginger the bear will swap groans in the feature event at Turner's Arena tonight. In a special match, Ernie Dusek will wrestle the Golden Terror.

The Chief, who says wrestling bears is old stuff with him, is not going to risk more than 30 minutes with Ginger, however.

An ugly rumor floating around yesterday had it that Ginger is sadly out of condition and will be no match for White Feather. Ginger, it's rumored, got into a storehouse of peanut brittle and is badly overweight.

Ginger will wear a tricky little muzzle designed to protect the Chief from playful bites here and there. The Chief will fear no muzzle.

In the preliminaries Jack Hader meets Abe Yourist; Warren Bockwinkle meets Al Mills, and Angelo Savoldi meets Abe Kaplan.

Various recreation divisions have been staging elimination matches recently to decide entries in the men's and women's singles and doubles and in the mixed doubles. The tourney, under the direction of Walter Brooks, will be free of charge.

Iowa Nine Defeats Purdue in Big Ten

Lawson Little Will Visit City; Expected to Play With Cox

'Little Grand Slam' Winner on Way to Summer Job at Bretton Woods, N. H.

Lawson Little, winner of the Los Angeles Open on the winter tour, will visit the city over the week-end and is expected to play a round or two with Wiffy Cox at Congressional.

The "little grand slam" winner, while an amateur, is on the way North to his summer pro post at Bretton Woods, N. H.

Cox also expected Craig Wood and Jimmy Thompson, but the latter has retired to a Georgia resort to rest and prepare for the National Open. Wood apparently went to his home club without stopping.

Harold (Jug) McSpaden, winner of the Philippine Open, is also expected here, where he will visit the Philippine Resident Commissioner, Joaquin M. Elizalde.

Pitt Has 68

Harry G. Pitt, Manor's six-time champion, played the course in 68 yesterday, two under par. The "Moose's" round was the lowest scored over the Norbeck layout this year. He played each nine in 34.

Max Taylor, Ralph Gibson and Herbert A. Mihills were members of the foursome.

Ladies' Day Golf Goes to Mrs. Roberts

Mrs. N. C. Roberts won first low net prize yesterday as the Kenwood women's golf committee staged the first ladies' day tourney of the season. The event was postponed from last Friday. Mrs. Roberts scored 101 and deducted a 31 handicap for a net 76.

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, playing as a Kenwood member for the first time after winning every major tourney in this section as a member of Indian Spring, was in a familiar role with her low gross score of 84. Mrs. Meckley was out in 44, but played the back nine in 40.

Mrs. Richard Thornburg won second low net with 108-28—80, and Mrs. Woodlief Thomas third with 94-13—81. Two tied for fourth, Mrs. J. C. Thurston, 108-25—83, and Mrs. J. C. Dale, 99-16—83.

Mrs. A. A. McEntee won the selective holes prize on the first nine and Mrs. Donald Kane on the back nine. Mrs. J. R. DeFarges had low putts for the entire round, Mrs. John Barron for the out nine and Mrs. S. T. DeLaMaster on the incoming nine.

Lucy Rose Boosts Pin Leadership

Lucy Rose strengthened her bid for high average bowler in the Ladies District League by picking up 21 pins on Lorraine Gulli in matches last night. Mrs. Rose, with an average of 118.60, now leads Miss Gulli by 65 sticks, with three matches remaining.

The leader's 371 set was high as Rosslyn won two from Red Circle. Blanche Wootton rolled a 145 game for the winners and Vivian Nolan, 121-333 for the losers.

Eleanor Bark posted a 338 set and Marie Spates a 124 game as Ice Palace took the odd one from Arcadia, with Beth Minson's 351 high for the losers.

Miss Gulli's 128-350 was high for Lucky Strike but the team lost two to Arcade-Pontiac, led by Ida Weinberg, with 366, and Margaret Lynn, 340.

TEMPLE

Al Works, championship bowler with Northeast Temple teams for nearly a score of years, rolled an all-time record set of 456 in the Temple League, starting with a 181 game, also a new mark. He followed with 136 and 139 games for the record total, that led Camden Tavern to a triple triumph over New Deal.

LUCKY STRIKE

Nat Widre, of Washington Paper, rolled a 176 game, a season's record, in the D. G. S. League at Lucky Strike, while high set went to Ed Loveless, Crosse and Blackwell, with 164-383. Sunset Prunes accounted for a team game mark of 846 and high set for the night, 1,799.

Little Hoyas Rout Blair

Georgetown Prep golfers, returning to the Metropolitan Schoolboy Golf League after a year's absence, threw a scare into the other teams yesterday by routing Blair, 9 to 0, and winning every match but one by a margin of 5 up or better.

Playing over their home course, the Little Hoyas won four matches by 6 up margins, two by 7 and one 5 up. Reds Clark, playing in the No. 1 position for the Blairites, extended B. McDonnell, host captain, before losing 2 and 1.

R. Boyland, a four-handicap golfer in his home town, had a 79, including a pair of deuces on the ninth hole, in defeating Pence, 6 and 55.

McDonnell (G) defeated Clark, 2 and 1; Boylan (G) defeated Pence, 6 and 5; Best Ball, Georgetown Prep, 6 and 8.

Brayer (G) defeated Parsley, 7 and 3; E. Sullivan (G) defeated Tabbutt, 7 and 3; Best Ball, Georgetown Prep, 7 and 5.

Brothers Take 8th In Ten-Pin Doubles

Richard Robbins, Dallas, Tex., used a 647 tally in the doubles to reach a tie for tenth place in the all-events with 1,882. He carried over 657 from his five-man effort and added 578 in the solo section.

Typos, J. C. C. In Recreation League Final

Meet in Title Game At Tech Tonight; Karp High Scorer

In two stirring contests at Tech High gym last night, Jewish Community Center and United Typewriters qualified for the final game of the city-wide basketball tournament conducted by the District Recreation Department. J. C. C. overcame Celtics, 49 to 28, and Typewriters defeated Trinity M. E., 30-22.

The winners will meet for the city championship tonight at Tech, at 8:30.

J. C. C. had little difficulty in disposing of Celtics, the tricky floorwork of Frank and Ocharam starring. Celtics were first to score, but the fast, accurate passing Center five soon ran up a big advantage for the Center team, which led at the half by 21-12.

Karp was high score for the winners, with 15 points, while Downs led the Celtics with 11.

In the second game, Quantrille opened the scoring within the first few seconds for Trinity, but the Typewriters soon got on equal terms and he held a slight edge at the end of the opening period, by 7-4. In the second quarter, Typewriters took more chances and capitalized on most of them, Tipton opening up the game with some goals from outside the zone which never touched the rim. The halftime intermission found the Typists ahead by 16-6.

JaneCothranLeads Asheville Golf

Asheville, N. C., April 10 (AP).—Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., shot a 40, 41—81 today in the second round of the Land of the Sky Women's Medal Play Golf Tournament and moved into the lead with a 166.

A stroke behind with a 167 was Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., yesterday's medalist with 83, who today required an 84 over the par 77 Biltmore Forest Country Club course. Helen Detweiler, of Washington, D. C., moved into third place in the 72-hole event by firing 85 to go with her opening 90 for 175. Mrs. Ben T. Parks, of Charlotte, N. C., was fourth with 90, 87—177. Tied for fifth place in the field of only 17 competitors were Mrs. S. B. Caveness, of Greensboro, and Miss Eliza Coxe, of Asheville, with 196s.

Redskins' Bosses Head For League Meeting

Redskins Owner George Marshall, Coach Ray Flaherty and General Manager Jack Espey will leave for New York today for the annual National Pro Football League meeting to be held at the Biltmore Hotel Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Elections will be held for a new president to succeed the late Joseph F. Carr.

The 1940 league schedule will be released during the meeting.

Espey stated the Redskins will offer some rule revisions at the three-day meeting, most of which are apparently an aftermath of last year's Giants-Redskin game in New York, in which Bo Russell's kick was ruled no good, and which precipitated a small riot.

The first of the changes suggested is: Extend the goal posts from 20 to 50 feet.

Secondly, have field judge place himself directly behind goal post on all attempts on field goals, and extra points; and third suggestion, have umpire and head linesman on line of scrimmage on all goal scoring-plays.

Manalo Beats Dado in Boston A. A. U. Final

1st All-Hawaiian Title Match in Amateurs Thrills 10,101 Fans

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 10.—In the first all-Hawaiian championship final in the long history of the National A. A. U. boxing tournament, Little Johnny Manalo won the 112-pound title by outpointing Dado Marino, by a scant margin tonight before 10,101 excited spectators at the Boston Garden.

Although both have been active amateur campaigners at home for many months, their title bout marked their first competitive meeting, which was so closely and keenly fought that the officials disagreed.

Manalo had a slight edge in two of the three rounds, but it is likely that the solid right hand hook he delivered to Marino's jaw at the final bell swayed the majority of the judges to his cause. As a result, he succeeded Jose Mercado, his countryman, on the national amateur flyweight throne.

The final competition for the 118-pound title was an all-Easttrn affair, during which Angelo Ambrosano, of Philadelphia, worked both hands so lustily that he piled up more than enough points for a unanimous decision over John Chimera, aggressive Buffalo, N. Y., bantamweight.

Sumner to Head CageOfficials Body

Frank Sumner, the oldest member of the D. C. Approved Board of Basketball Officials, was elected to the presidency of the official association at the annual meeting recently. He will succeed Artie Boyd, who was elected to the commissioner job to replace Orrel Mitchell.

The only reelected officer was Dallas Shirley, who again will act as secretary-treasurer. Allen Taylor was installed vice president.

Six new members were accepted into active membership—Phil Fox, Joe Sivigny, Bernie Lieb, Al Doran, Bill Carne, and Dave Osborne.

Chicago Cards Hire Conzelman

Former St. Louis Coach to Succeed Nevers in Position

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 10.—Jimmy Conzelman, former head football coach at Washington University, St. Louis, joined the professional ranks today by signing to coach the Chicago Cardinals, of the National Professional Football League.

Conzelman succeeds Ernie Nevers as the Redbird coach.

The new Cardinal mentor, aside from being numbered among the top-flight football tacticians of the Nation, has gained fame as orator, sports columnist and song writer.

Conzelman led his alma mater, Washington University, to the Missouri Valley Conference championship last year, surprising the college football world by resigning January 16. He served as head coach at Washington for eight years.

During the World War, Conzelman was a member of the famous Great Lakes team.

Coaching reins of the Chicago Cardinals, of the National Professional Football League, went to Jimmy Conzelman (left) yesterday when he handed his signed contract to Owner Charles Bidwill. Conzelman was formerly grid guide of Washington University, of St. Louis.

Indiana Will Play 4 Games on Coast

Bloomington, Ind., April 10 (AP).—The Indiana University basketball team, which won the 1940 National Collegiate Championship, will play four games on the Pacific Coast next winter and perhaps also in New Orleans' Sugar Bowl December 31.

Coach Branch McCracken announced last night that the Hoosiers would go west during the Christmas holidays to play Stanford, California, University of California at Los Angeles, and Southern California.

Favorite Out of Money as Omission Wins Kindergarten

Gilbert Rides Winner; Pays Backers $11

Zacharias, 1-4 Choice, Never in Contention; Marion Collins, 2d, Pete, Jr., Third

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bowie, Md., April 10.—Favorite players who have been putting up their money and collecting interest with regularity here went to the well once too often today. They installed a young colt as a 1-to-4 choice in today's Kindergarten Stakes and then watched him finish in sixth position as victory went to Victor Emanuel's Omission, an $11 shot. The favorite, which few could find in the rollicking field until the youngsters were well up the stretch, was the Millsdale Stable's Zacharias. He went up in the air for a brief moment when the break came. He had done the same in a previous race and then had come on to win.

But today was another day. For some reason Jockey Wall could not get him going. Wall applied the whip in no uncertain terms, but Zacharias just bobbed along. Second money in the field of nine, going the usual 2-year-old route of a half-mile, went to Sidney Gooch's Marion Collins, a length and a half in advance of a photgraph for third money, in which Pete Jr. crowded Charmful into fourth money.

Jockey Johnny Gilbert rode Omission, winner of two races last winter in Florida and it was the fourth time the Syrian-American jockey has gotten to the wire first in the Kindergarten. Omission's time of :47 4-5 was brilliant over the good track and the fastest running of the stake since 1934 when Angelic was clocked in :47 2-5.

The victory was worth $2,765 to Owner Emanuel. The son of Jock and Neglect was saddled by Trainer J. P. Smith.

Omission in Contention

Nannykins, a daughter of Wise Counsellor, was first to show in front but was soon joined by Marion Collins. After a brief tussle, Marion Collins shook off her rival and went into a two-length lead. Omission was within striking distance, however. In the stretch, Jockey Gilbert shook up Omission and then settled into a strong hand ride. Marion Collins tired and Omission caught her to win going away.

Perfect racing weather returned to Prince Georges County and a crowd of 9,000 reported for the sport.

Sons and daughters of Alan Clarke's stud horse, Mowlee which died April 2, dominated the early races. They were the winners in the second, third and fourth events and each triumphed by a wide margin. These victors gave Mowlee seven winners for the nine days of the meeting.

After Iskie, owned by A. J. Abel, won the first race in the role of a $6.80 favorite, the Mowlee horses got to work. In the second race, Manny B., in the colors of W. D. Blick and making his second start on any race track, won by four lengths in a field of 11 maidens. Jockey Lucas Dupps did the riding and the colt led every step of the way to pay $21.80 and put the finishing touches on a $154.10 daily double.

Ann Mowlee Wins

In the third race, Ann Mowlee went to town. The 4-year-old filly carried 100 pounds in the person of Apprentice W. Weber and won by two lengths. Charles F. was second and Extra Good, a Charles Town friend, was third in the field of seven. The winner paid $11.30.

Mowlee's third straight winner was a $3.50 favorite. Mowmart, owned by George Perry, of Upper Marlboro, sent to the front early and jogged the rest of the way around the track. The 3-year-old gelding won by three lengths while carrying 121 pounds. This was his second victory of the meeting. Millshow was second and Winter Sea was third.

Three winners in consecutive races sired by the same horse is believed to have set a record for this State.

DEAR AL:

Starter Jim Milton, in discussing electric starting gates and such, brought out there never will be a gate in which it is impossible for a horse to get hurt. "Horses are injured in their own stalls," reminded Milton and that just about sums it up. Pat Dwyer, trainer of the local division of the Millsdale Stable, is the leading conditioner at the meeting. He not only has fit horses but he has horses for almost any kind of a race in the book. His success and that of Hirsch Jacobs is running horses in the class in which they belong. With plenty of money behind them they can afford to do this. The small-time owner and trainer has to juggle them around, that is if he wants to keep them. Jockey P. Kieper was taken sick yesterday and canceled his mounts. Apprentice W. Weber and Jockey Joe Wagner are transferring their scene of action to New York. Andy K., second choice in the winter books for the Kentucky Derby, is now stabled at Laurel. He missed beating Bimelech by a neck when he ran to the outside fence entering the stretch in the Hopeful Stakes last year. Andy K., after working out at Laurel, will be shipped to New York for the Paumonok Handicap on Monday. Unless he shows something shortly, Yancey Christmas' Rough Pass will not be an entry at Louisville on Derby Day. The 3-year-old was a big disappointment in his first Bowie start. He didn't get off, however. George W. Farr, who recently purchased In The Red, Happy Host and Miney Mo, has arranged to ship the trio to Charles Town. Heraldic, White Hope and Portunus have been added to Starter Milton's schooling list. Jockey Moose Peters will swing into action at Havre de Grace next Monday. If any of you Benningites have a small radio around, I know a good spot for it. Thomas Randall, more than 80 years old and born a slave on the ground that is now the Bowie track, isn't getting around as spry as he once was and he likes to hear programs. In fact he some times hobbles half a mile to a friend's house where there is a set. If you have one down in the cellar getting full of dust, write me and I will be glad to pick it up and install it for this good natured old fellow. Art Brown and No Boy Jacobs "ain't doin' no good." Confucius say: Conville may be another Manny B.

BILL.

First race—Bright Harvest, racing for the Millsdale Stable at Santa Anita, needed his one race at that point and is reported ready for today's engagement. Bright Are showed promise in his one outing here and might prove troublesome. Distant Star is a dangerous contender.

Second race—Boston Mary won her last race over this strip in her first start this season. She receives a good figure in this company and should improve over her last effort. Adolf shapes up as the chief contender after a sparkling fourth, beaten two lengths by fair platers in Florida. Grand Duke has a good chance if fit.

Third race—Cherachin was second in his recent outing with platers of higher class, and on the merits of that effort, appears well placed. Close Kin has speed, but might need this race after being idle all winter. Higlaze is not outmatched and could threaten on best effort.

Fourth race—Little Mowlee accounted for his last in convincing style racing with platers of better caliber. He improves with racing and figures to repeat. Whoosh has early foot and held his own with this sort last year. He should last for the place award. Joe Smokey indicates he is a greatly improved horse and must be considered.

Fifth race—Tedmella had a rough voyage and barely failed to get up when beaten a nose by Lottery in his last race. He drops weight in today's race and this gives him a decided edge over his recent conqueror. Steel Knight receives a high rating and on best effort might upset the dope.

Sixth race—Redbreast was the victim of an inexperienced rider in his recent race when he was a heavily played favorite in similar company. The leading apprentice rider of the meeting is up today and he should make an improved showing. Short Distance was beaten by the top horse last start, but drops much weight. Presidential won his last, but moves up.

Seventh race—Dark May indicated his best form when he registered over a similar field of cheaper platers last start in good time. Brandon Prince also won his last, but carries much weight. Winged Victory held his own in Florida with horses of this class and might become a dangerous factor.

Best Bet—Little Mowlee.

Horses to Watch At Bowie Track

FILESTEO—Has been making the clockers sit up and take notice in short order.

NANSEMOND—Has been breezing well and will be placed in a good spot soon.

WHITE SAND—This router is rounding into tip-top shape and will give a good account of himself in first appearance.

AETHELWOLD — The Brann racer is training well and should make a good showing in Saturday's fixture.

U. S. Forecasts Winter Wheat Crop Shortage

29 Per Cent of Acreage Abandoned; Total Put At 426,515,000

By the Associated Press

With an estimated 29 per cent of the seeded acreage abandoned because damage and drought and other unfavorable weather conditions, the Agriculture Department forecast yesterday a winter wheat crop of 426,215,000 bushels, or the smallest since 1933.

Based on conditions prevailing April 1, the estimate was about 27,000,000 bushels larger than one made on the basis of conditions prevailing December 1. The department said conditions had improved since the latter date, but that there was much uncertainty about the crop in the heart of the winter wheat belt, particularly in Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and parts of Colorado and Texas.

A report issued by the Weather Bureau today indicated that drought conditions in the Midwest had improved since April 1 as a result of good rains during the past several days.

Below Ten-Year Average

The winter wheat forecast was nearly a fourth lower than last year's production of 563,431,000 bushels and the ten-year (1929-38) average of 571,067,000 bushels.

Despite the short crop outlook, officials said indications pointed to ample supplies to meet normal American requirements of about 660,000,000 bushels annually. A winter wheat crop of the size indicated, plus a normal spring wheat crop of 200,000,000 bushels would provide 626,000,000 bushels. Surpluses from past crops are estimated at about 300,000,000 bushels.

The department said preliminary surveys indicated that 13,114,000 acres of the 45,014,000 seeded to winter wheat would be abandoned because of crop damage. The acreage left for harvest would be about 31,900,000 or about 16 per cent under the 1939 harvested acreage and about equal to the 10-year average.

Other Crop Data

The condition of the rye crop on April 1 was said to have been 69 per cent of normal compared with 79 per cent a year ago.

Fruit and nut trees came through the winter with little or no injury from low temperatures, the Department said. Prospects were said to indicate fair to good supplies of most fruits for the 1940 season. Late spring and early summer supplies of citrus fruits were said to be smaller than last season due to severe freeze damage in Florida.

The department reported farm stocks of grains on April 1 this year and last, respectively, as follows: Corn, 1,285,505,000 and 1,220,603,000 bushels; wheat, 157,484,000 and 188,408,000, and oats, 346,160,000 and 414,866,000.

New York, April 10 (AP).—The foreign exchange market took war news—or what there was of it—in its stride today.

The Canadian dollar showed the best comeback, rising ⅛ cent to 84 U. S. cents.

The belga, however, added to Tuesday's losses with a new decline of 1-16 of a cent. Foreign exchange dealers said threats to Belgium's independence might have influenced selling. Norwegian and Danish currencies were unquoted. The guilder moved up a trifle while the Swiss franc was unchanged.

Foreign Markets

London, April 10 (AP).—The stock market tried a comeback with fair success today after jobbers had marked down prices early to discourage selling. The recovery was especially evident in the bond market, where government issues rallied more than £1 from morning lows. Home rails recovered substantially and industrial leaders firmed. Coppers and other base metals showed less inclination to get ahead. Rubbers steadied in line with an improvement in the commodity.

Paris—The bourse partially cancelled Tuesday's severe losses today. Scandinavian stocks, unquoted Tuesday, were marked down 23 to 28 per cent. Rentes closed unchanged to 90 centimes higher.

Amsterdam—American steel and copper shares advanced in the bourse but the general tendency was downward elsewhere in the foreign and domestic list. Local issues declined an average of 5 points.

Election Year Will Increase Western Union's Business

Cable Revenues Increase Because Of Censorship

By the Associated Press

New York, April 10.—Despite the reputation of Presidential election years as bad for business, Roy B. White, president of the Western Union Telegraph Co., said today his company expected to increase its earnings as a direct result of the coming election.

This, White told the company's stockholders at their annual meeting, is a normal experience in a Presidential year.

For the first half of the year the company looks for a slightly larger volume of business than in the first half of 1939. Cable revenues, White said, continue to show some expansion due to increased wordage brought about by foreign censorships.

Wheat Loses Part of Gains, Trading Quiet

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 10.—Wheat lost more than a cent of yesterday's gains at times today as war fever ebbed in the pit and rain fell in parts of the hard winter wheat belt, but corn showed strength.

The Commerce Department said yesterday March imports of gold, totalling $459,844,873, were the largest for any month since April, 1939, and double the February figure, and was nearly $100,000,000 larger than the March, 1939, total.

British shipments of metal in preparation for purchases of airplanes and other war supplies accounted for most of the imports.

Silver imports totaled $5,724,000 in March, compared with $4,070,317 in February, and $7,206,579 in March, 1939.

Steel Shipments Gain Over 1939

The changes are as follows: The Bethesda Industrial Savings & Loan Co. becomes the Southeastern Discount Co. of Bethesda; the City Industrial Savings & Loan Co. of Hyattsville becomes the Southeastern Discount Co. of Hyattsville, and the Silver Spring Industrial Savings & Loan Co. becomes the Southeastern Discount Co. of Silver Spring.

Parking Nickels Subject to Taxes

It's a little late, but the Treasury hopes you didn't deduct from your income tax return last month nickels dropped in parking meters. A belated Internal Revenue Bureau ruling said yesterday that these nickels cannot be deducted as taxes paid to cities.

If you can prove that the nickels were necessary business expenditures, however, they could be deducted the same as office rent.

U. S. Economist Reviews Bank Reserve Trend

Increase in Liquidity Is Called Substantial Development in 1939

One of the outstanding banking developments in 1939 was the substantial increase in the liquidity of member banks outside of New York City, caused by the further growth in city reserves and in country bank balances with other domestic banks, rather than by an increase in second reserves, according to Victor M. Longstreet, in the April Federal Reserve bulletin.

In an article on the "Investments and Liquidity of Member Banks During 1939," Longstreet, senior economist, asserts that at the 1939 close, the total of liquid assets for all member banks amounted to 59 per cent of gross deposits, against 56 per cent in 1938.

United States Holdings Increase

Last year investment holdings of member banks rose by about $1,140,000,000. All of the increase was at banks in central reserve cities and reflected chiefly a growth in holdings of United States Government long-term bonds and Government short-term securities offset, in part, by a reduction in Treasury notes.

"Although member banks' holdings of short-term Government securities, which form the bulk of their secondary reserves, did not change greatly during the year," Longstreet said, "the liquidity of member banks outside New York City and Chicago increased considerably, reflecting mainly the growth of reserve balances and of balances with correspondents."

The proportion of securities maturing in five years or less to total investments other than stocks remained during 1939 at 41 per cent for member banks in the aggregate, decreased from 56 to 53 per cent for other reserve city banks and stood at about 32 per cent for country banks.

Federal Policies Reviewed

In the same issue, Henry Edmiston and Gunhild Anderson, of the board's division of research and statistics, discuss "United States Government Corporations and Credit Agencies in 1939." They consider the following as the most significant changes taking place last year.

A larger proportion of their funds was obtained through sale of their own obligations in the market.

Although their total loans and holdings of securities of financial institutions increased $210,000,000 during the year, there was considerable variation in the trend of loans

Cotton Erratic On Foreign News, Loss, Gain Shown

New York, April 10 (AP).—The cotton futures market found the kaleidoscopic foreign news too much to cope with today. Traders just sat back and waited. At the close prices were 1 point higher to 2 lower. Even reports from Worth Street of heavy cloth business exerted little market leverage. Lower cotton prices at Bombay and Liverpool acted as minor depressants. Range follows:

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures started climbing late today but not fast enough to cancel early losses. Final prices were 2 points higher to 2 lower. Sales totaled 152 lots: May, 6.87* July, 6.95; September, 6.99*; October, 6.99*. (*Bid.)

Small amounts of crude oil sold overnight in the valley at 5¼@5⅜. At the close the Southeast and Valley quoted 5¾ cents bid and Texas, 5⅝@6⅛ nominal.

Stocks Turn Soft as Traders Try To Digest War News, Possible Results; Packing, Shipping and Paper Advance

New York, April 10.—The pace of trading in virtually all security and commodity markets in this country was slowed down today as the financial community attempted to digest developments abroad.

The action was far different from the burst of activity of Tuesday when Germany began her invasion of Scandinavia. In most cases prices retraced a portion of their moves of the previous day as investors studied the reports of battles and tried to guess ultimate consequences.

Thus the stock market had a turnover of 1,287,290 shares, which is a large amount, but short of the volume of the preceding day. There was no big bulge. Prices generally followed an irregularly lower course, closing off a quarter point.

Uncertainty Prevails

The war drove all other market influences into the background and the realization of the investing public that the war commands are letting out only a portion of the news added to the uncertainty. This led to some nervous liquidation. In the case of a few issues, such as the volatile paper stocks, there was considerable profit taking.

Although all groups of the average list finished behind minus symbols today, certain selected issues made progress. Packing shares, for example, attracted followers on forecasts the Allies would seek food supplies in this country. Armor & Co. was the second most actively traded stock of the session, rising ¾ point. Wilson & Co. firmed ⅝.

International paper and power led the list for the second consecutive session with 100,000 shares changing hands at ⅜ up. Preferred, which jumped nearly 7 points yesterday sold off a fraction.

Shipping Shares Active

Shipping shares were prominent, reflecting certainty of a long period of activity in shipyards to replace tonnage lost in the wholesale destruction of naval and merchant vessels. International Merchant Marine reached a new high closing at 11¾, a net gain of ⅞. Steels backed and filled.

The utilities, oils and chemicals were mixed, but losses for the most part were unimportant.

Another section which seems to have been halted in the advance is film stocks. Profits of foreign subsidiaries have been severely affected by the war. Airline shares were off quite a bit at one time, but improved late in the day.

Rail shares were again backward and some observers feel this may be due to a little jittery selling which often develops when war activities increase.

Dollar Bonds on Spot

Foreign dollar bonds again held the spotlight in listed dealings today, while domestic issues of all descriptions remained subdued. Trading in foreign issues was stimulated only mildly by the unsettling European events, but variations were great.

Oslo City 4½s, traded for the first time since Germany invaded Norway, fell 34 points, but this merely placed the issue in line with other Scandinavians. The general trend was better among Norwegian and Danish bonds. Turnover in all issues was $7,070,000.

A rally in Scandinavians clearly indicated an opinion that the initial declines had been overdone. Danish obligations moved up 2 to 6 points on modest speculative inquiry, while Norwegians showed 1 to 3 point advances.

Australian bonds dropped 2 to 5 points on indications of intensified warfare. Canadians were steady. German bonds tended to improve. Italians rallied. Belgians were irregular and Rumanian bonds took an uncertain course.

Lehman Corp. Attacks U. S. Investment Bill

Company Reduces Holdings of Common, Statement Discloses

By the Associated Press

New York, April 10.—The Lehman Corporation reduced its holdings of common stocks during the first quarter it was disclosed today in the company's statement as of March 31.

Common stocks, which represented 79.3 per cent of all assets and had a value of $54,421,113 on December 31, 1939, showed a net reduction to 75.4 per cent with a value of $51,579,836.

Net asset value of the investment company's capital stock as of March 31 was $32.53 a share against $32.72 a share on December 31, 1939.

Commenting on the proposed Federal bill to regulate the investment company business, the report asserted it "goes far beyond the limits of proper regulation," and that it contains provisions "which of they became law in their present form would in the opinion of your directors have a seriously adverse effect upon the operations and management organization of your corporation."

Hearings on the bill are being held before the Senate Banking Committee.

War in Norway Costs U. S. Firm $10,000,000 Trade

New York, April 10 (AP).—Extension of the war into Scandinavia has cast the Black Diamond Line of New York a prospective $10,000,000-a-year business with Antwerp and Rotterdam, Victor J. Sudman, president, said today.

When the neutrality act compelled the firm to remove its eight American flag vessels from the trade, the line chartered between 30 and 40 Norwegian freighters and continued business.

The firm built up the service for 20 years before the war and did a normal business of about $4,000,000 per year. The war jumped the trade to an estimated $10,000,000.

Pegasus Flies From Perch On Stable

But, Whether 'Twas His Idea or a Thief's Remains to Be Seen

Mrs. Peggy Stewart, of 203 Elaine drive, Chevy Chase, Md., may have wondered yesterday whether the wings that she manufactured and put on a merry-go-round horse a few years ago, were better than she thought. For according to a report she made to District police, the horse—which she had named Pegasus—had flown away.

Mrs Stewart conducts the Pegasus Stable at 6801 Western avenue northwest, where she boards horses and has them for hire. A few years ago in an antique shop in Maryland she found an old merry-go-round horse that had lost its tail and most of its paint.

After getting it home she painted it white, obtained the tail of a dead white horse, and with various materials fashioned some huge wings for the figure. Then with the aid of nearly half a dozen helpers she had it raised to the highest point of her stable and affixed it there for a weathercock—or rather weatherhorse. It outlasted the gales of more than two years, so that Mrs. Stewart was convinced that it was safe from the elements.

Therefore, when she found Tuesday that it was gone, there seemed only two possible explanations—either it had flown away, or there has been thieves. She told the police about the second possibility.

BLAME YOUR LIVER IF—

So you see how important it is to keep bile flowing freely! And what finer aid could one desire than Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, used so successfully for years by Dr. F. M. Edwards for treating his patients for constipation and sluggish liver bile.

Olive Tablets are unsurpassed in effectiveness because they stimulate liver bile to help digest fatty foods, they tone up muscular intestinal action, at the same time help elimination. Being purely vegetable, Olive Tablets are wonderful! Test their supreme goodness TONIGHT! 15¢, 30¢, 60¢. All druggists.

Philippine Work Of Evangelists Told at Parley

Evangelistic work on the Philippine Islands in the last 40 years has resulted in strong individual churches, well organized into conventions, delegates to the Philippines Mission Conference in the Calvary Baptist Church were told last night.

Dr. Frank Cartwright, evangelism chairman, read the report on the evangelical movement in the islands. Bishop A. R. Clippinger, of the United Brethren Church, presided.

Sponsored by the Philippine Committee of the Foreign Mission Conference of North America, the parley will have a reception for Philippine guests at 12:30 p. m. today at Calvary Church. The Rev. E. K. Higdon, of Indianapolis, Ind., will preside.

Odd Articles Provide Work For Jobless

Goodwill Industries Marks 5th Year In Washington

Everything from false teeth, corncob pipes, an old steel trap, an army gas mask of 1917 vintage to a bottle of milk of magnesia:

That's what 150 visitors at the open house celebration of the Goodwill Industries' fifth anniversary in Washington saw yesterday among the donated goods which the organization renovates to supply work for 120 otherwise "unemployables."

"However, we appreciate everything donated," said W. Harold Snape, director of the local Goodwill Industries as he showed visitors through 15 shops and working departments of the organization's four-story building at 1214-1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Snape then displayed some of the more useful articles which were donated in dilapidated condition, and transformed into salable products.

The Goodwill Industries is one business that survives, even though it pays 75 per cent of its income in wages. All products are donated. Last year the refinished articles were sold for $84,000. Of this, $64,000 went for wages and the rest for operating expenses.

Some of the donated articles are valuable as antiques, others, such as batches of love-letters, are of doubtful value. Recently an incoming load included a pair of ladies high-laced shoes dating back to 1900 as well as a pair of wooden Dutch shoes.

Mrs. Elmore Head Of Humane Society For Eighth Year

Mrs. Herbert W. Elmore heads the Washington Humane Society for the eighth consecutive year, after re-election at the seventy-first annual meeting this week.

Five hundred complaints of cruelty to animals were received by the society in the year ending March 31, it was reported at the meeting Tuesday at the Carlton Hotel. This figure was about 100 less than the year before, but H. Vanley Empt, secretary, attributed the reduction largely to the fact that the society did not continue to advertise its service, and also to the fact that there are fewer horses in the District now.

Mrs. Wallace Neff and William F. Hitt were elected honorary vice presidents.

Other officers were reelected as follows: George P. Alt, first vice president; Mrs. John C. Boyd, Miss Barnes Richardson, vice presidents; Frederick A. Genau, treasurer; H. Vanley Empt, secretary; Miss Mary Grimth, Miss Majorie G. Parry, Wallace J. Hill, George P. Alt, Frederick A. Genau, Miss Agnes G. Farnum, Miss Edna M. Patton, Dr. Henry E. Ewing, William G. Buchanan, Edward A. Preble and Mr. Empt, members of executive committee.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or "flu" are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If you're ill or kidneys suffer and fibers don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 14 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

If there is any remaining doubts in your mind about Washington possessing more jitterbugs per square inch than any other city in the country you should spend a few hours around the WJSV switchboard these afternoons.

As you may know, Glenn Miller, the jitterbugs' joy, is originating his three weekly broadcasts from the Wardman Park Hotel for some time to come. WJSV has the tickets for these programs and announced it would distribute them to Washingtonians, first come, first served, at the Earle Building studios.

It's really an awe-inspiring picture to watch the youngsters, lovely gals and husky boys, come up for their ducats. When our switchboard custodians hand the tickets over the recipients accept them like they would accept a commission making them Supreme Court judges.

They hold the tickets in their hands for a minute, then suddenly break for the doors and the elevators, as though fearful somebody would take their precious pasteboards from them. Mind you, these are not necessarily poor young folk who have never had an opportunity to see a broadcast or to sink up to their arm pits in the Wardman Park rugs, but rather fairly well-to-do lads and lassies in the grip of swing.

A couple of WJSV's young men assigned to the Wardman Park Theater for the broadcast came to work the next day looking like somebody who had spent a few futile rounds boxing Joe Louis. There was some delay in the seating, it seems, and when the hall was finally ready the mad rush of the jitterbugs was like nothing since the "Charge of the Light Brigade."

Incidentally, in a business slightly overrun with overnight sensations Miller is refreshing. While his success was practically instantaneous, it was one of those things that was no great surprise to musicians themselves.

LEAP YEAR LADY — by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

SHAMROCK O'TOOLE—Better known to her friends as Smoky, motherless daughter of Clancy O'Toole, pride of the neighborhood fire department, and in love with Karl Hetrick.

CLANCY O'TOOLE—Aging fire-fighter, retired because of injuries received in line of duty.

MRS. HETRICK—Mother of Karl, to whom Smoky is engaged.

KARL HETRICK—Young fireman protege of Clancy, who has gone to another city to claim an inheritance left by an uncle.

Smoky, Clancy and Mrs. Hetrick are gathered in the O'Toole living room, where they are preparing Smoky's trousseau. She is soon to be married to Karl Hetrick, who has gone to a distant city to claim an inheritance. They discuss plans for the wedding. Finally Mrs. Hetrick leaves, and Clancy falls asleep.

Chapter 3

"OH," she said to the small Neposito boy who stood with a note in his hand. "I thought you were Karl, Tony."

The boy grinned toothlessly: "Nope! Here's a note Dagne Olsen give to me to bring you."

"Oh!" Smoky said blankly, reaching in her pocket to hand the child a nickel. "Thanks, Tony. What's she sendin' me a note for?"

Tony shrugged. "Me no savvy. 'By, Toots!"

He ran down the steps and Shamrock sat down on a chair by the table. Strange that her old enemy would send Tony with a letter to her.

Smoky tore the missive open swiftly. It was one-paged and the writing small and round.

Startling News

"Dear Smoky," she read. "When this note reaches you I will be on my way to marry Karl. He didn't have the nerve to tell you, so I am writing because I do not like to go away without letting you know."

Shamrock laughed, uncertainly.

It was a joke. It must be! Dagne was playing a horrible joke. It was like her, the stuck-up thing! She'd always wanted Karl. Forcing herself to go on, Shamrock read:

"You'll probably think I'm lying. But you'll find out. We have been in love for a long time, only Karl didn't want his mother to worry, so we kept it a secret. I'm awfully sorry for you. Really, I am Smoky. For I know how you feel. But it's the breaks, I guess. I don't just know when we will be back from our honeymoon. As ever, Dagne."

Karl's mother, Mrs. Hetrick.

Shamrock sat for a long time with the letter in her lap. Dagne and Karl on a honeymoon. Strangely she couldn't seem to cry. It took quite a while for her to convince herself that Dagne Olsen was telling the truth.

Then, somehow, she got up and walked out of the house and down the walk to the Hetrick's and opened the kitchen door. She only knew that she had to get to Karl's mother. Mrs. Hetrick wouldn't let Karl marry Dagne Olsen. She couldn't.

Silently Shamrock handed Mrs. Hetrick the note and walked woodenly to a chair and sat down. Smoky cried easily over little things that touched her heart, but in great emergencies she always kept her head.

Mrs. Hetrick's hand went to her mouth in a gesture of fear when she saw the signature. As she read the note her face grew white. She swayed and groped her way to a chair, the note crunched in her hand when she was finished.

Karl's mother dropped her face into her hands and cried out:

"Oh, God! I guess you'll hate me too."

Smoky was by her side in a flash, with her strong young arms holding the stout figure in a vise of hysterical tenderness.

"I don't blame you," Smoky assured her swiftly. "Oh, Mrs. Hetrick, please don't think it'll make any difference between you and me."

Mrs. Hetrick's Grief

The mother rocked back and forth sobbing. "I was afraid! I was afraid! That's why I wanted you to marry Karlie right away."

Smoky said blankly: "Afraid? Then you knew—about them?"

Mrs. Hetrick broke into fresh sobs. "I thought it was just an affair. Like boys have with a girl who isn't nice. I thought he was just playing around with that Olsen girl."

Shamrock had never liked Dagne, because they had been bitter rivals since cradle days. But she had always thought of her as nice. In the way Mrs. Hetrick meant. She asked unbelievingly:

"You—knew Karl was seeing Dagne Olsen, and you didn't tell me? Did my father know?"

Mrs. Olsen shook her head. "I don't think so. I didn't tell him because he was sick. I didn't think anything would ever come of it. All boys are alike at his age. They have to have a woman."

Shamrock didn't believe Dagne was that kind of a girl. But even if she had, it wouldn't have made the shock any easier to bear. Karl—her Karl, going around with Dagne Olsen right under her nose and she didn't know it.

The girl laughed suddenly, so strangely that the mother stopped crying and looked at her curiously.

"I guess," Smoky's soft red mouth twisted bitterly, "Karl and Dagne must have had a lot of fun laughing at me behind my back. I—guess—every one thinks I'm a pretty big sap."

Mrs. Hetrick's arms tightened around her maternally: "Oh, you poor child," she said helplessly. "No one will laugh at you. Everybody will be sorry."

Smoky broke in with another bitter little laugh: "Feel sorry for me. I don't want their pity."

She stood up and her face was white and her eyes glistened dangerously, but her chin was up. "I—I think I'll go now," she said quietly, and walked out.

When the door closed behind her Mrs. Hetrick collapsed completely. It would have been much easier if Smoky had stormed and cried and sworn revenge against Karl. Because of her very bitter calm Mrs. Hetrick was afraid.

Alone With Her Thoughts

Inside her own kitchen door, Shamrock looked around dazedly, then sat down. She felt detached, half-alive, as though she had suddenly awakened and found herself in another world.

A world without Karl. Without his love. Karl was going to marry Dagne Olsen and bring her to the house next door and every day, all her life, she would know that Dagne was Karl's wife. They would sleep in the big, four-poster, black walnut bed a stone's throw from her own window.

There Dagne would lie in Karl's strong arms. Dagne's children would be in the little room at the head of the stairs. Maybe little blond girls like their beautiful, tall, graceful mother. They would be blond, because Karl and Dagne were blond. He wouldn't ever have a little red-headed girl, because she, Shamrock, would not be the mother of his children.

Smoky had had her family all planned. Four children. First a little blond boy, who would look like Karl. Then a little red-headed girl, who looked like herself. And later a little blond girl, who would be tall and beautiful like her father, and perhaps a red-headed boy. If they could afford such a large family.

Shamrock had dreamed of her little Hetricks until they seemed almost real. The chest and the dresser drawers upstairs were full of linens for their beds and soft towels and wash cloths for their shining little faces.

Drafting Begun To Clarify Status Of Welfare Group

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A new contract to define the status of the Welfare and Recreation Association was suggested yesterday as a way out of the dispute over management of Government building cafeterias.

This proposal was advanced at a conference of represenatives from the Association and the Federal Works Agency. Alan Johnstone, general counsel for the Federal Works Agency, said there was "considerable progress" toward an agreement which will be "satisfactory to all concerned," including the Government.

Agency Question Paramount

Center of the discussion yesterday was the question of whether the Welfare and Recreational Association is a Government agency.

Federal Works officials have stated that they believe the association is a Federal agency and should operate on that basis.

The association officials, including Capt. F. W. Hoover, general manager; A. J. Williams, trustee, and John W. Cross, attorney, urged that a new contract could iron out the association's relation with the Government while leaving it an independent corporation.

The officials agreed to meet again in the near future after the proposed contract is drafted.

"Civilized" Employes

A boon for Congressmen who have to pierce the word tangle involved in Civil Service revision was suggested informally yesterday.

Heart of the present problem is in the word "classify," and it appears with two meanings in the Ramspeck civil service extension bill. The first refers to extending the classified civil service—that is, giving employes civil service status in their own right. The second, involving the Classification Act, refers to jobs, and their grouping into salary ranges.

To keep the words clear, this proposal was made:

Miss Perkins Is 58

Secretary of Labor Perkins was 58 yesterday and she celebrated by sharing a large strawberry birthday cake with members of her staff and by a full day at the office.

She met with editors of the Associated Church press and predicted continued improvement in "orderly, effective industrial relations," through increasing skill which employers and labor groups bring to their negotiations. After the conference and lunch she spent the afternoon at her desk.

Gertrude M. McNalley has started her thirty-second year as corresponding secretary for the Women's Union of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Other officers, installed at a meeting in the Willard, were Olive G. Greer, president; Nicie B. Ferrell, vice president; Mrs. Gertrude Schellhorn, recording secretary; Margaret E. Garry, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Leo Williams, guide, and Mrs. Minnie D. Stevens, guardian.

Jobs: Applications for civil service exams will be received up to May 6 for the following positions: Information specialist, $3,800 a year; principal, $5,600; senior, $4,600; associate, $3,200, and assistant, $2,600; park superintendent in the National Park Service, $6,500.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night in Constitution Hall, with Millard Taylor as soloist. Program: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor (Bach-Goedicke), Symphony No. 29 in A major (Mozart), "Poeme" for violin and orchestra (Chausson), Sinfonietta (Roussel), "Walkuerenritt" from "Die Walkuere" and Vorspiel and "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde" (Wagner).

BROWN

Millard Taylor, concertmaster of the National Symphony Orchestra for the past two years, closed the list of the season's soloists at last evening's concert in Constitution Hall and was heartily rewarded with applause for his fine performance in the nostalgic "Poeme" by Ernest Chausson. His reading was characterized by purity of tone, security of technique and sensitiveness in interpretation. He drew a tone of eloquent quality and refinement, his phrasing was intelligently accented, and his conception of the music showed poetic insight.

Association with Cesar Franck in the relation of pupil and master left its indelible imprint upon Chausson, who evidently understood and appreciated the profound spirituality of his teacher. The influence of that simple and noble character penetrated the essence of Chausson's music, which is not imitative of Franck's style but reflective of his modes of thought. The "Poeme" is a lyric meditation of exalted beauty, and its impassioned passages are not so much dramatic as ecstatic with an unworldly bliss. Its melancholic mood is not that of despair but of realization that all earthly things are transitory and ephemeral.

Hans Kindler opened the concert with a firm and clarified performance of Bach's C minor passacaglia and fugue in Goedicke's transcription. His handling of tempi and stresses and his building of climaxes emphasized the inevitability of logical movement and the splendid structural dimensions of the work. The orchestra cooperated with the ready responsiveness that has made its playing so vital this season.

The sturdiness and four-square solidity of Bach was followed by the ingratiating charm of Mozart, as exemplified in the Symphony No. 29 in A major. Written in the composer's eighteenth year, it is radiant with youth and ebullient with good cheer. Although Mozart's father can be criticized for his somewhat tyrannical training and his exploitation of his gifted son, the fact remains that the travels of the child prodigy in France, England and Italy were of incalculable value to the early development of his genius. His impressionable mind retained all that he heard and the evolution of his style became an unconscious process instead of a studied imitation of others. That is the probable explanation of the Gallic grace and the Italianate lyricism which made so prompt an appearance in Mozart's music.

The novelty of the evening was Albert Roussel's sinfonietta for strings, a work so well described by Edward N. Waters in his program note as to make further comment superfluous. Those familiar with Roussel's idiom found the music readily assimilable, for it has a crystalline clarity of structure. Others may have been baffled by the witty and epigrammatic style which compresses much meaning into little space. At the close of the work, the audience, uncertain whether or not the end had been reached, refrained from applause until Dr. Kindler drily remarked: "That's all." Laughter mingled with the hand-clapping that followed this announcement.

The final numbers on the program were the "Ride of the Valkyrs" and the prelude and "Liebestod" from "Tristan und Isolde" which were performed with a color and spirit that aroused the audience to a prolonged demonstration. Dr. Kindler and his musicians were left with no doubts in their minds about the appreciation with which their efforts were received.

Darr Reviews Law Reforms To Help Poor

Provision of Legal Aid Is Considered Democracy Guard

Provision of legal aid for the poor is safeguarding democracy rather than a function of charity, Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association, told the Family Welfare Division of the Council of Social Agencies yesterday.

Darr addressed a luncheon meeting at the Young Women's Christian Association, Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Darr reviewed reforms effected by the bar association and other organizations, by which poor persons have been enabled to prosecute or defend small claims without becoming snarled in red tape or made bankrupt by court costs. As instances of progress he cited the streamlined procedure of the small claims branch of the Municipal Court and the revised system adopted for the landlord and tenant branch.

Recent inquiry by the association, said Darr, revealed abuses of the court's processes by some collection agencies and some installment dealers.

Rules of court have corrected these abuses in part, Darr said, adding that a statute to outlaw wage assignments, now pending in Congress, would accomplish a great deal more.

The present method of appointing counsel to represent poor persons in the criminal courts is inefficient, Darr declared, and might well be replaced by a public defender system, which is provided by another pending bill.

The meeting adopted a resolution applauding the welfare work of Maj. Gilbert Decker, of the Salvation Army, who is being transferred to other duties.

Other speakers at the meeting were Mrs. Olive W. Swinney, secretary of the child welfare agency, and Msgr. Laurence Shehan, of the Catholic Charities. Dorsey W. Hyde, division chairman, presided.

Life Can Be Thrilling, Prof. Hart Believes

Church Digs Tunnel To Get at Termites

Luther Place Memorial Church, near Thomas Circle tunnel, has begun its own "tunneling" project—to halt termite traffic.

The "stop" signs are steel girders, replacing old wooden supporting beams in the basement under the building, which have been bored by the hungry insects. To reach certain parts of the basement, workmen had to break a hole in the east wall of the structure, and dig an approach.

Band Concert Canceled

The band concert of the United States Marine Corps scheduled today at 2:30 p. m., has been canceled due to other official engagements, it was announced.
